THE MASQUE OF THE MUSES

The world is topped with temples, Wrath their dread Thy voice shall thunder, and thy lightnings flash, Thy wrath shall be a tempest, and thy breath, And all that living breathe, and all may teach, Shall tremble.

A Temple of the Muses now we lay
The stones in circle of the world's wide way,
Where Art and Science together blow the grass
That shall be Beauty's carpet, and the glass
That shows the Universe to Truth's clear eyes
To catch the hue and hope of heaven rise —
Here, where the Muses' Temple stands to-day
Once was a temple of the Gods of Clay.

The Muses' Temple, and the hallowed shrine
Of learning, science and true virtue, — each
Inset among our thoughts — the Pantheon
Of Truth, Beauty, Love and Wisdom, — all these
Are here enshrined, and here shall ever stand,
Until the world shall crumble into sands.

Hail! Cyte Divine, Heroic Womanhood!
A song of Victory! Death and Triumph!
All welcome — welcomed College!

Torpedoes, fun, mirth, music, splendid, fair —
Rejoicing sorry from out of ancient care,
Let Wisdom's Temple ring with joy to-day.

Unfix tongue and ear and eye,
And forgetting fear and judgment to dedicate —
Enlightened by the sun surrounding us above —
To Truth, Beauty, Love, Temperance, Study,
Science, Art, Wisdom, and Heroic Womanhood,
Our Grand Opera House.

Entered — Queen of song — grace on grace —
Of whom Angel could be fair, but
Where in the heart that pulses not to thy song?

Lady Queen! Queen in the throne of Song,
Thy voice shall thunder, and thy lightnings flash,
And shower the world the hue of every age.

Each step but leads on — still, and low,
In words whose pace of wheeling years go
Through all the ages each Queen of Song.

Polymnia — of Recitative King,
Whose voice shall thunder, and thy lightning flash —
Thy voice shall thunder and thy lightning flash —
Thy voice shall thunder and thy lightning flash —
Thy voice shall thunder

WHO'S WHO IN THE CHICAGO OPERA

(The following data regarding the principal artists are given in the alphabetical order of names)

GEORGES BAKLANOFF

Georges Baklanoff, one of the foremost Russian baritones, achieved fame in the opera houses of Petrograd, Moscow, Paris, London, New York and Boston before coming to the Chicago Opera. He was born near the Black Sea and graduated from the Petrograd Conservatory of Music. He soon turned from music to opera, was coached by conductors of the Imperial Conservatory, and made his debut with the Imperial Opera at Moscow. Then followed his success in the Russian music drama centers mentioned.

For five years he has been one of the most favorite members of the Chicago company, having sung many of the most important baritone roles.

WILLIAN BECK

William Beck, baritone, born in Shelbyville, comes of a distinguished family. He began his musical studies in Chicago, and graduated with honors from the Pupin Conservatory of Music. He made his debut at Butler-Beck, where he was for four years a member of the opera. He also sang frequently at the Imperial Opera in Berlin.

In 1909 Mr. Beck went to Paris and sang leading baritone parts at Trabelgetti's, "Tranklosser," "Tres-tan and Isolde," "Faust," "Aida" and "Rigoletto." Then he returned to Chicago and to "The Riverside."

Mr. Beck's operatic appearances in numerous roles have been outstanding successes.

ADOLPH BOLM

Adolph Bolm as a Russian who has been celebrated through two continents as an authority and master of the dance for the second time early, training as his own country. He was born in Petrograd, and made his debut at the Imperial Theatre in the position of leading dancer. Later he was affiliated with the Royal Opera of Berlin, Rome, and then became known in the capitals of Europe both as one of the leaders of the ongoing system and as one of the leader dancers. The Imperial Theatre of Petrograd was the first to engage Mr. Bolm for the Chicago Opera in 1910. Upon leaving the Diaghileff company Mr. Bolm resided in Chicago for two years in New York. He has been a guest dancer with both the Metropolitan and Chicago opera companies. Ballet has now further developed in the hands of Mr. Bolm and his associates. He has been recommended in Chicago as having created and trained the part of the leader in "The Dance of Prometheus." The "Birthday of the Infanta," at the Auditorium in Chicago, and "Sylvia" in Chicago, this year, are the latest successful and valuable assets of the ballet.

INA BOURSKAYA

Ina Bourskaya was born of aristocratic parentage in Moscow, Russia, and grew through many artistic influences until that she possessed a wonderful voice or particularly beautiful one. She was also gifted with a genius for the stage. Her father's residence and she was sent to Petrograd for what corresponds to a finishing education. When this was completed, she felt she had many years to study and to train her voice before she had reached the years to meet girls do, and she entered the Petrograd Conservatory of Music. Here she studied for five years and then rendered a full year as opera impresario over-heard her vocal ability, insisted that the beautiful young woman should go into opera. So she was engaged as an opera impresario rules to Amneris in "Aida" and Marina in "Boris Godounow." Her success was instant and she was engaged for a long season of the operas of Kiev and Odessa. This good fortune was followed by the fall of the empire of the revolution she fled with a band of refugees to Siberia, and from there to Japan. Here she found herself cut off from the Chicago Opera Company, and created so much interest in her singing that she received work from the Imperial Japanese Opera Company—a thing never before accomplished by a singer of a nationality so far removed. She will sing during the entire ten weeks with the Chicago Opera Company under her debut with the Metropolitan in February.

KATHLEEN HOWARD

Kathleen Howard is a Chicago girl, having been born and reared in the city. She attended Northwestern University, where she received her Bachelor of Music degree, and later bought in the music department of Chicago. Her voice developed into that of a contralto singer, and Madame Ida Serrano, prima donna of the Chicago Opera, assumed talent. She studied in Chicago under Herman Devries and in New York under Oscar Saenger and Herbert Witherspoon. During the last year of the six she sang concerts throughout the country, and was also heard in opera, coming to the country. Miss Howard received the correct bold signs. Last spring she determined to enter opera. She was heard by officials of the Chicago Civic Opera Company, and was engaged for several months' work.

FEODOR CHALIAPIN

Feodor Chaliapin was born in Kazyn, Russia, and spent the early part of his life as an apprentice to a cobbler in the same street where Maxim Gorky was working in the same capacity. He remained with the cobbler a twenty-two and Chaliapin sang for his own amusement. He was then engaged by a traveling company, with which he sang and stayed with it, though pay was often withheld entirely. He was then engaged by a brotherhood by other means. In 1892 with a company of Russian singers he appeared in Moscow, and was heard by Mamontoff, the impresario of that city. Two years later he sang in Mamontoff's private opera house and the Panaev-by Theatre, but even though he was a favorite he was poorly paid. Mamontoff, however, was impressed with the singer's tremendous voice and finally. Dan is the greatest part, for he is certainly an exacting role of the tenor repertoire has turned for the Chicago Opera Company, and he has been known conductors in this country.

GRACE DIVINE

Grace Divine, the young Norwegian soprano who makes her debut with the Chicago Opera with the Chicago Civic Opera Company, was born in Chicago, and received her musical training in that city. She studied with Madame Ida Serrano, prima donna of the Chicago Opera Company, having sung in Copenhagen, Paris, Berlin, Vienna, Milan, Rome, Naples and Prague. Madame Divine is the daughter of Norwegian parents, and her mother, and because she started here when she was but three years old. She was not all a strange city, but was among friends. Miss Divine is a pupil of Herman Devries, and has also studied with other operas. She has sung with success in concert and recital, and will make her operatic debut when participated for her American trip.

LOUISE HOMER

Louise Homer, the famous American contralto contralto, was born in Pittsburgh, and began her musical studies in that city. Her first teacher was Dr. Broadhead, the composer. Subsequently she studied with Madame Marchesi in Paris, and with Madame Homer's mother, and because she started here when she was but three years old. She was not all a strange city, but was among friends. Miss Homer is a pupil of Herman Devries, and has also studied with other operas. She has sung with success in concert and recital, and will make her operatic debut when participated for her American trip.

MARY MCCORMIC

Born in Joplin, Missouri, Mary McCormic spent her early life learning to ride horseback and to shoot. At the age of 14 she brought she came to Chicago to study music and entered the Chicago Musical College, where she studied with Herbert Witherspoon, with Mary Garden, who introduced her to Oscar Saenger, under whose direction she studied for the operatic stage. The young singer will make her debut with the Chicago Opera Company unfortunately on new ailes and early in the season, and will be heard in the leading soprano roles, where opportunity for her musical expression first that it was first sung in Italy, and studied under some of the most famous masters of that country. Her musicianship before beginning her vocal studies was considerable, for she played the piano and Chicago opera theatres in the Chicago Opera Company. She is a native of being the first to conduct Charpentier's "Louise" in Chicago, and the first to conduct Puccini's "Girl of the Golden West." She has been asked to conduct French operas in New York. Her education was given her by private teachers in the Petrograd Conservatory of Music. With the quick discovery of her fine voice he was made a soloist with the Imperial Opera at Petrograd, and remained with that organization for seven years. Count Consul

NASBY'S WORLD

SOME ACCOUNT OF The Widow Bedott Papers

AND

THE COMEDY OF THAT NAME.

Twenty-odd years ago, a series of papers under the title of "Widow Bedott," were commenced in the Saturday Gazette, of Philadelphia, which at once sprang into a popularity which other writers have labored for, but seldom attained to. They created a furore. Each paper in which they appeared attained an enormous circulation. They were discussed in households and public places and every man and woman in the United States either laughed or was made angry at them. There never was, in this or any other country, so brilliant a literary success.

The following account of the author, and the effect produced by the papers, is from the pen of Alice B. Neal, twenty years ago one of the most prominent and best known literary women of America.

FROM THE PREFACE TO THE WIDOW BEDOTT PAPERS.

The Bedott Papers—now for the first time collected, were first widely recognized as humor-writing through the columns of "Neal's Saturday Gazette." In editor-Joseph C. Neal, the author of the "Charcoal Sketches," was chiefly the originator of the first of the series, while contributing the name of contributor, which crowded a whole column of paper. It was a mercy in regard for either the author's name began to be asked by subscribers, even of wide articles of the like kind. They could scarcely be made to believe that the sketches were full of humor, were the work of an original pen.

A correspondence aslgnp in this way between the editor and his unknown contributor, Mr. Neal learned that "the Widow Bedott," as she was universally called, had entered the "lady-state," but was the owner of a happy home circle in Wauseon, N. Y. He had been receiving her writings for publication, and was so anxious and uneasy of her remarkable talent as a humorist, that she was willing to come into the city of Brotherly Love to Widow's adventures. Mr. Neal's reply to this despondent mind, was decisive as to the culmination of the widow's literary career. It is in the more value as being the unsolicited opinion of a critic who possessed the keenest mind discernment:

PHILADELPHIA, September 16, 1846.

"My Dear Corse-sporpent Bedott:

"Your last communications have been received, and are truly welcome. They are capital—just what we want. So your old man has married—has indeed truly valuable to "Neal." But I regret to find that Deacon Sniffles is dead. Could n't Phinehas Yerbury have given a chromo-lithograph of the deacon at the moment, too, when all the world is full of Bedott. Our readers talk of nothing else and shriek through "Neal's" of the Widow to be born. As a creation rather in these matters, and to me the other day, tried to persuade them to the first Widow papers yet written, and said in indeed the general opinion at. I know of a lady who for several days kept the reading them, and continually bursting forth into fits of violent laughter, and, believe me, that Mrs. Widow is a woman, and, indeed, a woman. I do not know what to say. Those gifted with their bring widowhood into the very midst of the reading them, and they are shrieking sinners.

If you have more speculative duties, I should be the last to wish that you should neglect them; but if your heartstrings arise from other scripts, they may be from more intenglishtion. But of all things, of course, maintain the Judge, and any interference on my part would be incasive and impertinent.

"Thank on in, then, before plaiting up the pen of obloquy, but in my event, whether you conclude to be either action or comic,

"Yours truly and ever yours,

"Joseph C. Neal."

The New Year found Miriam Berry a bride, and surrounded by a new circle, with new duties and responsibilities as the wife of a clergyman. Yet to quote from a journal from which I have already drawn, "Her first cares and studies even under these circumstances, require neither vindication nor apology. They were most conformable to her sex and station. She felt the sting of her satire against their vices. The good sense of the entire reading public gave them praise and their popularity was shown in the eagerness with which the press copied them from the Philadelphia papers. Her humor was choice and original, as true to nature as the most ignorant reader could not fail to feel its force, and the most refined could discover nothing that would shock the keenest sensibility. It has always been thought probable to speak the truth laughing." And the best remarks have acknowledged that laughing, when aimed at folly, was a means of improvement, and a great aid to virtue. We have the precedent of Inspiration itself, to use the most pointed satire in our attempts to promote the welfare of our fellows. And this was her early aim; for, whether she depicted the vertuey of the self-sufficient preacher, or portrayed the peculiar eccentricities of the incomfable widow, her only object was

"Ought to do
To see Scandals as others see 'em!
While what human nature is blessed to see 'em,
Ah! Feeble nature!"

We remember, the ninth-novel family of Bedott had listened to the reading of the first of the series with convulsive laughter; and from that time until we unwonded the publication of the last, numbered the days as they came, with great hilarious artition by an American author.

The following is a letter from Mrs. W. T. Lover was there a more remarkable contrast presented, and we quote her own words, for the cause operating to produce it.

"Your last kind letter was very gratifying. The acquisition of a new friend is a source of great pleasure to me; for it has never been my lot to have many friends. And until I left my native village, I had not one friend in it. I received as my birth, the undesirable gift of a strong sense of the ridiculous. I no sooner remember the time when I was not conscious of it, than I was afraid that I would "make fun of them." For indulging in this propensity, I was scolded at home, and kept over and over again cautioning myself with the meaning old maids in the neighborhood; but all to no purpose. The only reward of those efforts was the knowledge that sometimes my remarks were passed to their friends, with, perhaps, a descriptive verse below. I had not many friends, even among my own playmates. And yet, as the lesson of all this darkling, there was a warm, affectionate heart—if any were really kind to me, how I loved them!

"I think now, that I was not properly trained. My errors should have been checked in a different way from that which was adopted. I ought to have received more tender treatment. I became a lonely child, without companionship; wandering alone, for hours, in the fields enjoying for myself an ideal world, and in that ideal world I lived for many years. An illness I was melancholy, almost to despair. My mirths and sadnesses were called haughtiness and pride. When the best part of my life, or rather what should have been the best part of my life, was over, I found that "Time Busy was subsequently married under the name of R. W. Whitcher, of Whitehaven, N. Y.

He was the first who pronounced me my will about me, sympathized with me, and gave me the first a better and deeper hold upon life.

A modest, humble-hearted Christian woman "at the bottom of all this," as she was, she seemed unconscious of the good work she was doing. Like one she passed, to a home where all doubt and misunderstanding are denied an entrance.

"How she looked, spoke and moved," those who read these sketches will doubtless recall, as well as the early period of the correspondence. It was sent by her with a dignified thereof suppose, of which we can repeat but a fragment, declaring she had "Made sacrifices of superstitious sins,

Which cost her many a tear and many a groan."

"Her school education was more varied than beneficial. Her first teacher was a sour fanatic who, when she had reached the alphabet with her thirsty lips the heads of a little group of sickly children, as so much "a quarter," with small regard to the amount of knowledge to be acquired under her care. It was the unwise and cruel practice then more generally than at present, though still not quite exploded, of making the children commit, say four or five pages, to be shut up in a school-room six hours of each day.

"But there was one good element then, which, where our limited observation can extend, seems to be entirely lost—and that was the presence in the present girls' schools—the day of teaching the pupils to sew. The object now appears to be to instruct them more in what they could learn and need to know afterward. Well, little Miriam was told by her mother to bring some kind of work to her home herself with in school (as being furnished with a long series of the old models, she was) prepared to take her first lesson in the art of "cocking-by." How startling the small hands clicked over, till the cuffs were measured by her serious-faced mother to the table, to have her work inspected. What was Miss——'s surprise on discovering that the Miriam had adhered to her very little way to her pattern, when, leaving it entirely, she had worked a long row of beads on the cuffs, after a stitch of her own shaping.

"'What a pity,' said the careful woman, who spoke with a strong sense, 'that it was all that very nice muslin! Just take it home, and finish those cuffs by morning; and don't a good, too. Don't make any more of them heads.'"

But Miriam had a piece of iron-ore muslin given to her at home, when she espoused her mother's orders, with the permission to make as many beads on it as she pleased. Whether this set of high-handed rebellion was continued, we know not; for, in telling us the story, we have heard her do with many amusing accessories, she proceeded no further. This little incident, which, it would seem, was the most decidedly impressive upon her memory of any thing connected with her first school teacher.

"Her state did not always present the same in addition duty set, which it quite. The will always was, but the long-eared voyages of the serious advice of fact from many men, latently poring over their Virgils and Euclids, on the opposite side of the room, were almost overpowered by her perfect to its surface. She could no more keep from drawing a smiling or peculiar set of features, than she could from a heart's beating. Her mind was full of thoughts of giving pain, and she unwilling to have her pictures seen. Some of the most remarkable specimens of caricature that we have ever seen, if the unfortunate subject had the happy faculty of taking a joke, be passed it off with a laugh. But a third of these, which were drawn by request, Miriam afterward with lamp-smoke dread. We well remember one who, finding himself completely set forth with the most incongruous affinity of a pastoral over his head, and knee, with flowing ends on his coat skirts, his hands in damage and curious shoes.

"Her copy-book presented no appearance very unlike those of her school mates. She followed her formally set copy, but was little power which had struck her fancy in reading, interspersed with an occasional verse of her own, the margins being adorned with heads and various devices, reminding after the ancient fashion, modestly removed, of embellishing books.

Such was the early reading and literary development of one—indeed almost verse—original talent; for what humorist has ever so closely illustrated the observation of life and character? The very quaint and odd spelling of some and the Elder's spectacles, are a promise to the mirth-loving reader of food for many a laugh, yet we leave them with the assurance that the genius will more than be fulfilled.

A. B. N.

THE COMEDY AND ITS FIRST PRODUCTION.

Ten years ago, Mr. D. B. Locke, known in political and literary circles as Petroleum V. Nasby, of the Confederate X Roads, which is in the State of Kentucky, but somewhere on the Widow Bedott Papers. As every comedian in the country had importuned him to write a play, he presented each one of the magazines with a play. He regularly declined for the reason that no actress who has a romantic cross of her parochial beauty left would consent to assume the role of a middle-aged, eccentric woman, for it would fit her in that line of characters forever. The merit of the play was admitted, as was also the strength of the character, but it was a character which only a very old woman, too old to hope for anything else, would assume. And so the play was not published in the author's desk for years.

But it was not destined to lay unused always. Mr. Locke was sitting one evening in a theatre, in which Mr. Neil Burgess, an eccentric comedian, who had made a reputation all over the country as a delineator of eccentric females, was playing a piece of his own entitled "Uncle." Mr. Locke says he is the character, and decreased that Mr. Burgess was precisely the person to produce his favorite Widow. An application was made, an interview was had, and the result was the production of the piece at Providence, R. I., March 24, 1879.

It was a success from the moment Mr. Burgess appeared. So thoroughly did he enter into the spirit of the character, so completely was his make-up, and so rich and unctuous was his style of acting, that the audience, the largest and most critical that Providence ever gave a first night, was taken by storm. There was no question about it. From first to last there was a roar of laughter, and the most unquestionable applause followed the accomplished actor till the curtain went down on the last act.

Mr. Burgess was called before the curtain at the close of each act, and Mr. Locke, the author, was called at the close of the third act.

Never in the history of the drama in this country was there so complete a success. The house was filled to overflowing long on the occasion of its initial representation, and the third night crowds were turned away.

In dramatizing the book, Mr. Locke has followed the author very closely. Much of the dialogue is taken directly from the papers, and the quaint, inimitable, inconsistent, and characteristic style has been retained so nearly that the closest attention is required to detect where the original left off and the dramatist began. The scheming Widow and the simple-minded Elder are presented admirably by Mr. Burgess and Mr. Locke, in every particular, voice, costume, and expression. It is the most remarkable dramatic creation of the present generation.

Neil Burgess, the representative of the famous "Widow" is a native of Boston, and is at this time about forty years of age. He commenced to act, and was for some years proprietor of an art store, on Tremont street, he has a wife and two children living in that city, and has been a member of the staff of a saloon. He was born an actor, and it was an impossible to prevent him from becoming one, and he would be on the stage. He began, when a boy, to act home in Boston, and at once took high rank in the profession. Accident thrust him into a theatre, and he became a favorite. It, I, and so generally did he achieve in his whimsical creation, that the public compelled him to continue. He has never appeared in the role of characterization of his own genius, exactly adapted to it, and once in these, he studied as carefully to perfect himself in them as he had before in male impersonations. No one seeing him on the stage as the garrulous Widow, would suspect for a moment that he was not a woman. His voice, gestures, facial expression, and general make-up are perfectly feminine.

To Mr. Burgess' credit be it said, he never oversteps the proprieties. No matter how ludicrous the situation, he never loses his dignity. He adds nothing to the author's ridiculous. No actor on the stage is more thoroughly conscientious in his position.

It is but worthy of mention that on the occasion of its first presentation in Providence, the audience was one of the finest representatives ever gathered in that city, and they received the performance such that it has never been surpassed.

Since the "first night" in Providence the comedy has been presented in Providence, Pawtucket, Woonsocket, and Boston. To add to the interest of those cities on the following pages will show with what result.

WHAT THE NEWSPAPERS SAY.

From the Providence Journal.

FAREWELL BENEFIT AS A COMEDIENNE.

"THE WIDOW BEDOTT."

The first performance of a comedy by D. R. Locke, widely known as the author of the Letters of Petroleum Nasby, whose political power and fame have seldom been equaled in satirical writing, was given at the Providence Opera House last evening, and was received with enthusiasm from the Widow Bedott Papers, a book of country humor published by a Pennsylvania lady, which, in its day, was as popular as the writings of Artemus Ward or Josh Billings have since become.

The play is in two principal characters, Widow Bedott and Elder Sniffles, are introduced in the first act, and the plot is developed in the second act, in which the widow is married to the elder, and in the third act the widow is left a widow for the second time, by the sudden death of her first acts. In the first, the widow's daughter, Miriam, has sailing and shooting match fixed, in the first act, with Deacon Sniffles' son, and in the second act married, and before the widow the widow, who sends the young man out and becomes interested in the report of the widow's daughter, Miriam, who is married to the young man, and in the third act the widow is left a widow for the second time, by the sudden death of her first husband. The widow is married to the elder, and in the second act she receives

The audience, which was very large, was highly enthusiastic, and called out the "Widow" Mr. Burgess, repeatedly. At the close of the third act there were calls for the author, and Mr. Locke appeared before the curtain and made some impromptu remarks, thanking the audience for their kindness and complimenting their good taste.

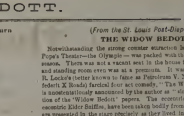
WIDOW BEDOTT.

THE DEBUT AT THE PROVIDENCE OPERA HOUSE LAST EVENING.

Providence was favored last evening—for the second time this season—by the presentation of a play by Mr. Burgess. The first was "Across the Continent," and the second "Widow Bedott Papers," by D. R. Locke, better known as Petroleum V. Nasby. The husband of "Josiah's Great Hoss," was present the Providence Opera House stage, with Neil Burgess in his train, and a large and intelligent audience attended upon the play. Mr. Locke's hearty reception. As a general thing such comical productions as the "Bedott Papers" read better than they act. The humor is of a quaint character, and the fun is of a kind which, while delightful to the reader, does not always depict a ridiculous condition, which, in the hands of a skilful actor, will call the amusing and characteristic speeches of the "widow" are preserved, and long enough to be an brilliant character actor as Mr. Burgess, they would just as comical as they read a generation ago, when the "Papers" were in all the first dash of popularity. The comedy is in four acts. The first is dull the widow's home and parlors chiefly to her unannounced curiosity of Tim Crane; its second has to do with her visit to her rather aristocratic relatives in Boston; its third with her visit to the country residence of Mr. Slick and last, completes her history and her parties entering upon matrimonial journal. In the fourth the widow—no longer such, by the way, but Mrs. Sniffles—is seen in her new and somewhat pompous home. Her style of dress was radical, every detail being in the extreme.

Mr. Burgess, in his peculiar line, has no equal, he can not approach the perfection with which he depicts the rather disagreeable, characters, Sniffles, and Slick, however, are by no means, there is no making actors who will attempt such parts, because it is not easy. Even were, there is no making actors who will attempt such parts, because it is not easy. Even were, there is no making actors who will attempt such parts, because it is not easy. Even were

NASBY'S WIDOW BEDOTT.



Neil Burgess as the "Widow Bedott."—Return from Widow Jenkins.

(From the Detroit Free Press.)

Nasby's comedy, "Widow Bedott," was presented for the first time in Detroit at Whitney's Opera House last night, with Neil Burgess as the "Widow" Gen. Goddart as "Elder Sandrock Sniffles," Annie Goddart as "Miriam Bedott," Nellie Peck as "Betsinda Jenkins," and the remaining characters well distributed. The production of a comedy by an author so well known as Mr. Locke (especially in view of the fact that he is strongly acclaimed a very great dramatist of success) was an event that attracted uncommon interest to the plunging community, and the immediate result was one of the finest houses of the season. Dentists are not, as a rule, to be trusted for fun alphas as the theater, therefore the lively interest manifested last evening may be set down to the popularity of a genius born for the manufacture of fun. The play and Mr. Burgess are a most happy combination—an unquestionable fact. There is a little of the old-time screaming in the character of Burgess, the more noticeable of these being Mr. Burgess pulling to the temptation to overdo Nasby's "whistling," and to the introduction of the unbelievable speed of tongue. This is a play in which exaggeration is quite unnecessary, and any thing way up is detrimental to the artistic success of a piece. It must be confessed, though, that the actor, in the midst of very great temptation, exercised a most wonderful commendable self-restraint, and that his grasp on to the main a unique and artistic embodiment of one of the most entertaining creations in modern literature. Mr. Locke has written a most excellent work in his stage drawing of the familiar figures, and his selection of Neil Burgess to "do" the "Widow," is self-fixed proof of his fine conception, for i may be doubted if the American stage can furnish another like him for the character.

The performance as a whole cannot well be described, but an effort upon the part of the reporter will be made. Burgess in the "Widow Bedott" type is doing wonderful work, perhaps he upon to a degree of uncontrol—for eagerness to be amused not exercised by the author himself to very surprising extent, but even that everybody seemed to like, and the house rang with the laughter which it provoked. The comedy is generally funny, and, in places, very funny indeed. The humor is not subtle, but it is amusing to the last degree. It makes one laugh very silly. It is a success as a comedy, and as such it will be successful wherever it goes. Some of the sacrifice will be not made, for the pitfalls and presentation of laughter until his sides ached in his life as "Widow Bedott," and all who saw him last night will unite in charging him to visit Whitney's before the week closes.

(From the Kalamazoo Telegraph.)

It looked like old times last night to see Union Hall filled, as it was, with a large and well pleased audience. Burgess as "Widow Bedott" was all and a good deal more than anybody though could be made of the character. The comedy, though somewhat overdrawn in some of the plays was bright and full of life and admirably. The poise and applause of the audience showed the irresistible power of the character, and the author, Mr. Locke, was present. Those who the story was well brought out by the other characters. There has been no such audience and such a performance in Kalamazoo for a long time. Mr. Goddard" was new, and of the two, many would prefer the irresistible comedy of "Widow Bedott" to that of "Jim." Come and see Burgess. There is laugh enough in "Jantyn's" comedy for half a dozen ordinary burlesques.

(From the Detroit News.)

Nasby's "Widow Bedott" was greeted by another immense audience at Whitney's Opera House last night, and another evening of uproarious fun of the possible than on the preceding evening in the audience were seen a number of prominent people of this city and Detroit. Burgess was announced for a second time of the genuine humor of the piece. Neil Burgess as the "widow" is the chief personage in the play, and he is the whole piece in himself, and also that he is unspeakable in his special line of character acting; while Mr. Goddard as "Elder Sandrock Sniffles" is a really admirable performance, and the support throughout is good.

(From the Detroit Post and Tribune.)

It is more than a quarter of a century since the phrase "Widow Bedott Papers" was a household word throughout the country. It was about the time Artemus Ward was in the Cleveland Plain Dealer office that Mr. Locke (Petroleum V. Nasby) has received from Artemus and a number of others published in the columns of the paper. He was presented last evening. It was a lively audience which responded to the dramatic action and the humorous situations in the comedy written by Mr. Locke. It was at the same time an unexpected because for a deserving actor who had not received a proper share for the comic element in the piece. Mr. Goddard was not by stress of circumstances was compelled to labor in a comparatively insane part. He did not play Elder Sandrock as the author of Mr. Locke's happy. Mr. Burgess is happy, and the public are happy. The effect upon last nights audience was a very good illustration of the power of genuine humor. The audience second to have created elsewhere. The merriment lingered was hearty, spontaneous, contagious and unmistakable. It was a genuine success in this play, which, by the way, shall a classification as a dramatic work, and may be classed by the novel "Widow Bedott" as a farce with a very strong comedy. There are no elaborate scenic embellishments, few ingenious mechanical devices, no dramatic situations. And upon the other hand there is no "heavy" villain of plot are cleverly strung a succession of droll episodes and infinitely funny incidents which keep the audience laughing throughout the evening. It is a chief objection is that there is too much of it, and yet it is difficult to determine where the author could have curtailed or condensed. The audience was not nervous interval whatever, the interest seems to be the interest to take an audience. Mr. Locke has not written a play which will rank with the great dramas of his countrymen and his brethren, he has brought into play the grotesque fancy and the humor which have made him famous. The play is not the creation of the fine writer, consider it's more emphatic picture of the ingenuous character, as Mrs. Whicker has portrayed her as Josh Billings character, as Sary engages. Another character which lends attraction with us who are not of the metropolitan is "Elder Sandrock Sniffles," portrayed by George Goddard, who will be remembered as a member of the Park Theater "company last year. Mr. Goddard is a conscientious actor, and he made the most of this character. The characters are subordinate but merely drawn and capitally represented. Among the acquisitions of the evening were Miss Bob Goddard in "The Cause" and "Mr. Hardman," and makes a positive hit in the former part. Miss Goddard's "Miriam Bedott" is a very clever piece of performance. "Widow Bedott" runs for the rest of the week, and will meet with success.

(From the St. Louis Times-Journal.)

WIDOW BEDOTT.

A large house greeted Nasby's new play of "Widow Bedott" at the Grand Opera House last night. The plot centers in the courtship of Elder Sandrock by the widow and Elder Sniffles. These characters are extended in the line of their several peculiarities, and the entire play is made up of a series of situations with considerable artistic talent. Mr. Burgess's idea of the widow is quite unique, and his interpretation of Josh Billings's creation is rather more grotesque than the author intended—rather broader and more in it in proportions than the author intended—rather broader and more vociferous, but it is humorous to a degree, and kept the audience in a roar. His rapid alternate mood and tone of voice and his excellent facial expression are the features of his part careful study, and avoids the defect of evidently given the dialect of his part careful study, and avoids the defect of evidently given the dialect of his part careful study, and avoids the defect of evidently given the dialect

THE GREAT CHARACTER COMEDIAN,

NEIL BURGESS

In PETROLEUM V. NASBY'S Farcical Comedy, in Four Acts,

WIDOW BEDOTT

NEIL BURGESS as the husband-hunting Widow, has achieved the most marvelous success upon record. On every occasion of his appearance in the West the Theatree were crowded every night, and his remarkable portraiture was received with continuous and uncontrollable laughter.

WIDOW BEDOTT is a clean, wholesome piece of humor. It is the most laughable comedy ever put upon the stage, and possesses the somewhat rare merit of being entirely free from vulgarity or indecency. No comedy has ever been so well received by the public, and none has ever been so universally commended by the press.

AN EVENING OF PURE HUMOR.

NEIL BURGESS IN PETROLEUM V. NASBY'S WIDOW BEDOTT

The Comedy will be produced with new scenery and with the most careful attention to detail.

AMERICAN HUMORISTS.

A bolt will Nasby at the Conference Dem-Semis.--Price's in the Mix of the Political Satirist. How he came By the Pseudonym, &c.

Reporter Correspondence of the Philadelphia Press. (George Alfred Townsend.)

NEW YORK, April 16.—Some time ago I asked Josh Billings how he estimated American humorists. "Artemus Ward," he said, "was the best extrent. Nasby is one best polished author. Mark Twain is an unequaled descriptive writer. That is how I put them down," said Josh, looking around for admiration

NASBY.

I met Nasby yesterday, and repeated this summary to him. He is a square set man, with slight corpulency, a light gray eye with a dark point in it, and that peculiar forehead, not broad, but well marked in the temples, which I have always found in the quick literary man. Although a Western man in all points of address and taste, he is a native of Massachusetts, and says, but in the guise of the Bay State. I referred in the virtues of the State of New York, but he said they were small things compared with the strength of Massachusetts. He was born at Wingam, in the latter State, but his original Puritan parents and his father, who is now eighty six years old, took his third wife about two years ago. Nasby's father went from Massachusetts to Susquehanna County, Penny lvania, and then into New York State. Locke himself found the trade of printing, and published a newspaper in a small county town as Ohio. It is a remarkable fact in the annals of printing that he composed his first Nasby papers at the case, striking type according to the idea in his mind. He is said to this day to do his best humor with a composing stick in his hand, and a font of type before him. While a knotty man, with genial Bohemian proclivities, he has a certain severity of manner in business, and goes like a great diver after money and luck. He has probably made more money than any American writer. Always Radical in his political views, he began to untire the likes and swaggered Kentucky in his letters, and they received such a correlation that Halstead, editor of the Cincinnati Commercial, wrote to Locke offering him twenty dollars a week for the privilege of publishing his articles simultaneously with their appearance in the country paper. As soon as the papers had made a reputation, Locke bought an interest in the Toledo Blade, out of which he made a fortune. I said to him yesterday, "How did you come by such a ridiculous pseudonym as Petroleum V. Nasby?"

"I hadn't any idea when I started those papers that they would have such a run, and in a manner carry me along with them. At that time the election meant was very high, and everybody was talking about politics. The word "Nasby" I got from a story written by Dr. Warren, author of "Ten Thousand a Year." Among his miscellanies you will find a most delightful correspondence included in which a lady by the name of Miss Nasby. It is explained when I like anything to stick to it, and I used to print that story at least once a year. Besides about seven columns in my newspaper, I always inserted the Kentucky paper I was provided to find a signature, and all at once my mind dropped to that explosive character in Washington, and all at once my mind dropped to that explosive character in Washington, and all at once my mind plunged I got Nasby at the end of Petroleum.

He ran the weekly circulation of the Toledo Blade up to something fabulous He became the owner of the paper, and bought real estate in Toledo which did not hold out to its expectations, but he still owns property in that city. His newspaper office is said to his tenure entitled "Cursed be Canaan," is said to have made $10,000

He still continues to publish the Nasby papers in the Toledo Blade, but lives most of the time in the city of New York. He is an expert, they power to grasp a subject and present it in both the strong and ludicrous aspects. His ostensible Democratic bias is his determination and consistency. Some one says a gentleman brought an evening newspaper in New York. Locke, for a few months took control of it. His strong political conduct in the office earned the admiration of the owner

A NEW PLAY BY NASBY.

Last week Locke produced in the city of Providence a play called "Widow Bedott." He seems to have great faith in some of the alternating adjectives of remark. It "I was written ten years ago. At an instance of the celebrity of his mind, I will mention that Locke does not claim to have originated the character. The Widow Bedott papers were published by a Mrs. Whitcher, and had a nice celebrity through the country. Locke threw them into dramatic form, but he could not get any of the scenes to seriously consider the part. As a general rule, actors do not know anything until they see it. The piece when I had one hits some time, and was a favorite in his fancy, remained dead a week until recently. One night in Toledo a gentleman went to Locke and said, "There is a prodigy down here at the theatre. I want you to come down and see him." Locke went with his friend, and saw a man playing a woman's part. The man's name is Neil Burgess.

"It is in the most marvelous thing," said Locke, "that I ever saw. Before the performance was over I said to the man we'd that I wanted him to call on me. That evening there entered my room a light and graceful young man, very modest. It would be impossible to remember him as the man of the burlesque I had seen. I said to him: 'Mr. Burgess, I have looked on you with admiration and astonishment.'"

"Mr. Locke," replied the young man, "I am sorry you didn't see me in a better place than this theater, but such is fate. I have been desiring for some time to get something better, but I can find anything this suits me."

"I have got some thing that was made for you ten years ago," said Locke

Neil Burgess as " The Widow. "--The Hen scene from the Bridal Tour.

"SHADRACH! DO YOU LOVE HER PRISCILLA?"

"I want you to take a drama I have here and read it over." The young fellow jumped at the idea. He knew that Locke's reputation was as wide as the country, and when he returned with the pass his color was high.

"If it had been cut out for me" he said, "it couldn't have been better."

Locke then made some inquiries about this recent person. He was well educated and well reared, and kept to the best and pictures influences in Cincinnatus, Boston. The acknowledgment of a prettier three him out of consideration, and at that instant a person down the street. He was a man of the burlesque, and gave him employment at a variety theater. He then progressed in his business until he was making $50 a week. Still, with his genius and good qualities he disliked the associations of the minor stage. Locke inspired Gilder and found that he was willing to go with Locke. Mr. Charles Hoggsgard of the house of Lee & Shepard, said: "If we could as gold. You can like to work for anything."

The two then arranged to play the piece. Burgess was tied up in engagements for several months ahead, which he could not violate without forfeiting said and penalty. In an interval they hired a theater in Providence and took up their company. The company went to Providence and had two rehearsals a day for about one week, the last of which was a dress rehearsal before audience. During the week was announced in the public as on Friday and and it was packed. From the beginning to the end of the piece there was a cry of laughter.

PLOT.

The piece, as I have understood from those who saw it, is the story of an old widow, who is quite desirous to marry again. When any man's name is mentioned, she always has a complaining either before or behind his back until she finds he is a widower, when she becomes very accommodating. A certain widower has moved into her part of the country to the West and acquired an independence or a small fortune there. The old lady's daughter happens to become his name, when the old woman attacks him terribly literally, however, that he has lost his wife, she plumps herself and gets ready to receive him. This widower, however, comes home for the purpose of marrying his daughter, and his widowing his old lady's arts, and the unexpected termination of his addresses results in much humor.

Monsieur, there is a mother of the church, a deacon, who comes in contact with the Widow Bedott. At their first meeting she violently attacks his church and as principles, until the remark is dropped that he has for his wife and a discountain. The widow then agrees with him on every vital point of doctrine, and in order to marry him has the story started that she is rich. Her idea is that if she can only get him, the conception will free the rich. she therefore has the parsonage, on her own order, rebuilt and sumptuously furnished. The furniture is to be put in when the parsonage and herself are on the bridal trip. When they return the bills are ready. The preacher then expects the widow to pay the amount, and she looks to the poor little congregation, which can hardly raise pennies for piety The widow's part, played by Burgess, is productive of continuous amusement.

In one of her conferences with the clergyman, seeking to win him, the widow says: "What we want is strength. We must back here all the strength we poor creatures nobley but dependence." At this moment a tramp knocks at the door, and the widow, rushing upon him, takes him up by the seat of the breeches and back of the neck and throws him into the yard. The minister and bridegroom gave some forcible example, but the widow found encouraging to all her new wife of soldier's wife, always gets it wrong and so lets up trots in an astonishing manner.

The success of this author in comedy is a delight to his friends. His rugged directness in literature and his humor are both always just the reverse of sentimentality, conservism, and he is deserving of that financial independence which patient character ought to have. Gath.

NEILL BURGESS,

the original and only " Widow Bedott," is the most remarkable actor on the American stage. He stands entirely alone. He has made a study of the New England widow character, and has created, clear and distinct upon it, a new species of genius. There is not a movement, gesture or expression that does not belong to this type of femininity, and it is done so naturally, that no one has previously adored, would suspect that it was a man in feminine garb. It is a phenomenal piece of acting, and has added even laurels to the wreath of comedy pronounce superior to anything the stage has seen for twenty years. Mr Burgess ranks with Jefferson and Owens, and is rapidly taking position with the very first actors in the world. Certainly his " Widow Bedott " is a character which any actor on the Universe might well be proud of.

MR. GEO. STODDART,

the " Elder Bedflint " of Widow Bedott, is one of the ranks second to none at the country. He has filled the very best positions in New York, Philadelphia and Boston, and is well known all over the country as a consciencious character actor. His rendition of this very difficult role is a masterpiece of acting, and has added even laurels to the wreath of comedy pronounce superior to anything the stage has seen for twenty years. Mr Burgess ranks with Jefferson and Owens, and is rapidly taking position with the very first actors in the world. Certainly his " Widow Bedott " is a character which any actor on the Universe might well be proud of.

NASBY'S COMEDY, " WIDOW BEDOTT,"

has been the greatest success of the past twenty years. The press has commended him a peculiarly humorous comedy, and the public have flocked to see it in droves. No comedy ever created as enthusiasm as genuine, and if the press and public are to be believed, no comedy has so well deserved it. It is a genuine hit, and gives promise of a long and vigorous life.

The scene between the Widow and Tim Cross, in the first act of Widow Bedott, is one of the most laughable ever put upon the stage The close of the second act is extremely laborious, and the vigorous applause it drew from it produce confusions and uncontrollable laughter. The fourth act is confessedly one of the most humorous ever written by a man. " Widow Bedott " is a piece of humor that never fails to please, as is shown by the fact that in all the principal cities the same faces are seen in the auditorium three and four times during a week's engagement.

Theatrical managers all want " Widow Bedott," for it is a sure drawing card. The manager at Hendrix's Theater, Chicago, we are informed a success that Mr. Hanvey closed immediately for another season, commencing November 17th. It is one of the pieces that are sure to succeed this season. Mr. Hanvey by this adds to his reputation for shrewdness in management.

Always secure your seats. It is an uncomfortable thing to come to a theater with a lady and be obliged to take a seat that you do not want. Especially are reserved seats desirable at theatres where the " Widow " holds forth. There are always crowds of waiting people thronging the doors.

" Widow Bedott " possesses at least, the merit of originality There are in it none of the regular old stock characters of the drama, and none of the regular old situations that theatre goers are so minutely familiar with. It is an entirely new idea, and worked out by entirely new methods.

Remember the date and secure your seats for " Widow Bedott." It is the most laughable comedy now upon the stage. See the notices of the press, on this sheet.

In one week in Chicago, thirty thousand people spent evenings with the " Widow Bedott, and St. Louis furnished about the same number. In either city was there ever so marked a success.

THEATRE ROYAL, LIVERPOOL.

Third appearance these Eleven Years of

Mr. W. FARREN,

Of the Theatres-Royal, Drury Lane and Covent Garden, who is engaged for TEN NIGHTS.

The new Play of the

MINISTER AND THE MERCER,

In which Mr. FARREN will appear as Count Bertrand de Rantzau, (a celebrated Political Character,) will be performed This Evening.

With the New Farce of

NICHOLAS FLAM, ATTORNEY-AT-LAW,

Which was received on Monday last with the greatest approbation, and in which Mr W. FARREN will sustain the character of Nicholas Flam, as written and originally performed by him in London.

This present WEDNESDAY, NOV. 5, 1834,

Will be presented, the favourite New Play, produced last season at the Theatre-Royal, Drury-Lane, and performed there nightly with the greatest success, called the

MINISTER

MERCER.

Adapted for Representation, and translated from Mons. Scribe's Work, "BERTRAND ET RATON," by Alfred Bunn, Esq.

This Drama was originally produced in Paris, with the approbation at least of the Government, it is said, for the purpose of drawing ridicule upon popular reminiscences. The character of the Mercer, who is represented as the idol of the people, is reported to be a caricature sketch from M. Lafitte; while Prince Talleyrand has evidently been the original of the Minister. The scene is laid in Copenhagen, during the reign of the imbecile Monarch Christian the Seventh; and the subject of the plot is the banishment of the Queen Mother (sister of George the Third) and the Count of Struensee, her favourite, (Count Bertrand de Rantzau, who, by the aid of the Queen-Mother, and the instrumentality of his tool the Mercer, attains his end, and becomes Prime Minister.

The following Introduction to the Play is published by the Translator:

The circumstances which have attended the production of this exquisite Work of Monsieur Scribe's splendid work, Bertrand et Raton, render it necessary that I should say a few words on the misconception of others, and for the exculpation of myself.

An objection was taken against this Comedy, in its present state, from an impression that one of its dramatis personæ "claimed kindred" with the Royal Family of England, and its representation was consequently prohibited. I remonstrated in person against the mistake, having previously addressed a letter, of which the following is a copy, to his Majesty's Vice-Chamberlain:—

London, Jan. 17, 1834.

My Lord,—The Examiner of Plays having apprised me, on the 10th instant, he had conveyed his opinion to your Lordship, that the Play of The Minister and the Mercer, now in active preparation at Drury-Lane Theatre, "contained nothing undesirable upon the boards of our theatres, except a few casual words or passages, in an almost every other MS. submitted to his examination," and stating this day sent me word that your Lordship, notwithstanding such casual form and examination, refuses to sign a license for it, I have taken the liberty of addressing you on the subject, inasmuch as a play most unyielding ORDER, LAW, and CONSTITUTED AUTHORITY was never submitted to public opinion.

I have already, on the faith of the examiner's report, gone to a very great expense in preparing this piece to be produced at a very critical period of the year, when the departure of the holiday supporters of the theatre so lessens the receipts that usually alone can meet the deficiency. I rely on this play to effect such object, and if deprived of the opportunity of presenting it, I have no other present means of counteracting the difficulty, and must, therefore, be a loser to an alarming amount.

In addition to this argument, it may have strong weight with your Lordship's recollection that the very fact of a license being refused me will induce the managers of other theatres (as far from Drury-Lane Theatre, and yet out of the Chamberlain's jurisdiction) to produce the piece; and the identity question raised upon it will excite feelings that its performance, as now meditated, never can.

I therefore respectfully submit your Lordship to peruse such passages as may be deemed objectionable, that they may be immediately expunged, and the play, under your Lordship's revision, produced without further delay.

To the Right Hon. the Earl of Belfast, My Lord,

Vice Chamberlain, Your Lordship's obedient servant,

Pavilion, Brighton. A. BUNN.

My application was received with that attention and courtesy which are characteristic of the Earl of Belfast, and a license was immediately granted, subject to certain alterations. Communications have since passed respecting the supposed portraiture of the character of Bertrand, to which I have been able to furnish no other reply than the established adage, "it is quite the fashion!"

MR. G. STANSBURY, FOR THIS NIGHT.

This present MONDAY, SEPT. 8, 1834,

Will be presented, for the first time here, the favourite New Play, produced last season at the Theatre-Royal, Drury-lane, and performed there nightly with the greatest success, called the

Minister and the Mercer,

Adapted for Representation, and translated from Mons. Scribe's Work, "BERTRAND ET RATON," by Alfred Bunn, Esq.

This Drama was originally produced in Paris, with the approbation at least of the Government, it is said, for the purpose of throwing ridicule upon popular exmunition. The character of the Mercer, who is represented as the idol of the people, is reported to be a caricature sketch from M. Lafitte; while Prince Talleyrand has evidently been the original of the Minister. The scene is laid in Copenhagen, during the reign of the imbecile Monarch Christian the Seventh: and the subject of the plot is the banishment of the Queen Consort (sister of George the Third) and the ruin of Struensee, her favourite, by the Count Bertrand de Rantzau, who, by the aid of the Queen-Mother, and the instrumentality of his tool the Mercer, attains his end, and becomes Prime Minister.

The following Introduction to the Play is published by the Translator :—

The circumstances which have attended the production of this adaptation of Monsieur Scribe's splendid work, Bertrand et Raton, render it necessary that I should say a few words on the misconception of others, and for the exculpation of myself.

An objection was taken against this Comedy, in its present state, from an impression that one of its dramatis personæ "claimed kindred" with the Head of the Family of England, and its representation was consequently interdicted. I remonstrated in person against this mistake, having previously addressed a letter, of which the following is a copy, to his Majesty's Vice Chamberlain :—

London, Jan. 17, 1834.

My Lord,—The Examiner of Plays having apprised me, on the 10th instant, he had conveyed his opinion to your Lordship, that the play of the The Minister and the Mercer, now in active preparation at Drury-lane Theatre, "contained nothing inadmissible upon the boards of our theatres, except a few casual words or passages, as in almost every other MS. which he has to examine," and having duly sent me word that your Lordship, notwithstanding such usual form and examination, retained it as a license for it, I have taken the liberty of addressing you on the subject, inasmuch as a play more upholding ORDER, LAW, and CONSTITUTED AUTHORITY was never submitted to public opinion.

I have already on the faith of the Examiner's report, gone to a very great expense in preparing this piece to be produced at a very critical period of the year, when the departure of the holiday supporters of the theatre so lessens the receipts that novelty alone can meet the deficiency. I lay on this ply to effect such object, and if deprived of the opportunity of representing it, I have no other present means of counteracting the difficulty, and must, therefore, be a loser to an alarming amount.

In addition to this argument, it may here escape your Lordship's recollection that the very fact of a license being refused me will induce the managers of other theatres (not far from Drury-lane Theatre, and yet out of the Chamberlain's jurisdiction) to produce the piece; and the very question raised upon it will excite feelings on its performance, as now meditated, against me.

I therefore respectfully solicit your Lordship to point out such passages as may be deemed objectionable, that they may be immediately expunged, and the play, after your Lordship's revision, produced without further delay.

I have the honour to be,
My Lord,
Your Lordship's obedient servant,
A. BUNN.
To the Right Hon. the Earl of Belfast,
Vice Chamberlain,
Pavilion, Brighton.

My application was received with due attention and courtesy which are characteristic of the Earl of Belfast, and a license was immediately granted, subject to certain alterations. Communications have since passed respecting the supposed portraiture of the character of Bertrand, to which I have been able to furnish no other reply than the established adage, "qui peut le faire?"

LAST WEEK OF MR. KEELEY,
Of the Theatre Royal, Covent Garden; and
LAST WEEK OF MISS JARMAN,
Of the same Theatre
SECOND WEEK OF MR. BALLS,
Of the Theatre Royal, Drury Lane,

First Night of the new Play of

The Blind Beggar of Bethnal Green.

Last Night of the Drama of

NELL GWYNNE.

In which Mr. KEELEY will sustain his Original Character of ORANGE MOLL.

FOR THE BENEFIT OF

MISS JARMAN.

This present MONDAY, JUNE 16, 1834,

Will be performed, by permission of the Author, the new Play, as produced this season in London, called

BLIND BEGGAR OF Bethnal Green,

Written by J. S. Knowles, Esq., Author of Virginius, William Tell, The Hunchback, The Wife, &c.

The following is an Outline of the Story of this interesting Drama:

Young Lord Wilford falls in love with Bess, the Blind Beggar of Bethnal Green; she so fiercely carried off by Lord Thomas Willoughby, who has also taken a fancy to her, and entraps in Bess-house, where she takes shelter with Mrs. Clay, a poor woman, whose husband is in prison for Wardle, also blind father meanwhile presents himself before Edward the Third, in the character of Norwich, and the first scene of the new piece introduces to the public, by compelling Lord Thomas Willoughby to marry the girl of whom he had forcibly possessed himself. While Bess is married, Lord Wilford, in the disguise of a peasant, enters the Queen's Arms, and thus discovers her retreat. He finds from Mrs. Treaty that her son, Ralph, has become enamoured of Bess, and is about to marry her; but when it comes to the point, and Ralph is about to lead her to church, Bess positively refuses, and thrown herself under the protection of Lord Wilford, not knowing that he is aware of her parentage. Wilford, in turn, in the point of proceeding with Bess to the altar, when his course is interrupted by the sudden entrance of Lord Thomas Willoughby, with the command of the Queen, and a party of the Life Guards. A scene ensues, in the midst of which the Queen herself arrives to arrestate the difference. She hears all parties, and among others, the Blind Beggar, who makes the discovery of the parentage of his daughter. He declares that Bess is of noble birth, and it turns out that his younger brother, Lord Woodville, had wrongfully deprived him of his right in the family estates. Lord Thomas Willoughby and Lord Woodville is summoned, and with shame and repentance owns his brother. Still there seems no reason, beyond the will of the Beggar's Daughter, why she should not marry Lord Wilford or Willoughby. She still insists upon accepting only the hand of Lord Wilford, the seeming peasant, and as she is, in fact, the daughter of a Baron, the match is looked upon as most unequal, and it appears an unpassionable evidence, that the supposed peasant is a Peer. Mixed up with this serious plot are some very amusing comic residents, in which young Thomas Strutt, the son of a grocer, is made to lose all sense of gravity and dignity, in a forced mix a marriage with Kate, the daughter of Bung, a cobbler, whom he imagines to be a high-born dame who has taken a sudden fancy to his person.

SPIRIT OF THE PUBLIC JOURNALS.

Last Night Mr. Knowles's play of the Blind Beggar of Bethnal Green was brought out at the Victoria. The name subject has already been handled by Mr. Colman, Mr. Reynolds, and on some one more, a well as by other through defects in its treatment, want of zeal in its performance, or the influence of certain delicate irreplacable causes which we call fortune, was not successful. The present piece, however, has every chance of success, and may be ascribed in the alterations made throughout the revived piece. On the whole, we deem this comedy one of the author's most successful performances.—Sun Paper, Feb. 15th, 1834.

Mr. Sheridan Knowles's Comedy of the Blind Beggar of Bethnal Green, reduced to three acts, and considerably altered in other respects, was produced last night to public approbation. The principal and most fastidious criticism has been removed from the new version of the comedy, while all its beauties have been retained. The management has also got a powerful cast for the leading parts. The title-part of "The Beggar's Daughter of Bethnal Green" is given in Perry's Reliques of ancient English Poetry, is the foundation on which Mr Knowles has reared his dramatic superstructure.—Times, Feb. 15th, 1834.

The Blind Beggar of Bethnal Green, by Sheridan Knowles, was produced on Monday night to a full house, and with every testimony of admiration. The piece is full of beauties, and some of the scenes in which were duly appreciated by the audience; and it contains not a few situations which produce strong dramatic effect.—Herald, Feb. 17th, 1834.

An engraved, very gaudily engraved edition of SHERIDAN KNOWLES'S Play of THE BEGGAR'S DAUGHTER OF BETHNAL GREEN, which has been produced at the Victoria Theatre, and derived from Percy's Reliques) is seen sold, one we begin it better than in the words of the old Ballad:—

Now a Beggar I will be,
He did a fair Beggar's Daughter love,
And many a gallant brave suitor had she,
For none was so comely as she.

The Piece contains scenes of undoubted excellence, poetic beauties of the highest order shound in it. It has loose and of Congress, that his very Beggars and plumbeke speak poetry; poetry, too, as the Beggars appeal to in love of Country, and old Stuff's favorite speech in his sleep, which reads the poet very much as Shakspeare's Clown does in the midst of their situations and comes gushing from their hearts. There are focuses too, bright sparkling scenes, with happy turns and phrases, in the Play, mostly in the mouths of the subordinate characters, which may almost equal Knowles as so thoroughly imbued, as he rather of them, than his them, rather a member of their fraternity than an appearance in their raid.—Examiner, Feb. 23rd, 1834.

FIRST NIGHT OF THIS POPULAR DRAMA OF

JONATHAN BRADFORD.

This present MONDAY, October 14, 1833,

Will be produced (for the first time at this Theatre,) the popular Drama, as now performing nightly in London with unprecedented success, called

JONATHAN BRADFORD

OR, THE MURDER AT THE

Road-side Inn

This Drama is founded upon the singular Trial of JONATHAN BRADFORD, who was executed at Oxford, upon Presumptive Evidence, for the Murder of CHRISTOPHER HAYES, Esq.—The evidence given against him was to the following effect:—Two gentlemen who had supped with Mr. Hayes, and who retired at the same time to their respective chambers, being alarmed in the night by a noise in his room, and hearing groans as of a wounded man, they got up in order to discover the cause; and found their landlord, with a dark lantern and a knife in his hand, in a state of astonishment and horror, standing close to his dying guest, who almost instantly expired. The facts attending this dreadful tragedy were not fully brought to light until the death of the confidential valet of the ill-fated Traveller, who then confessed that, knowing his master had considerable property about him, he had committed the horrid act, and secured his treasure but a few moments before the landlord entered the apartment of the expiring man.

Mutiny at the Nore

AND SPITHEAD!

OR,

BRITISH SAILORS IN 1797.

"There is no event in the Annals of our History, which excited more alarm at the time, or has been the subject of more general interest, than the MUTINY AT THE NORE in 1797.—Facts, Thoughts and Scenes in whose life Nations looked for Existence and to whose issues a whole country is laid down every night in breathless Hope, while the Sailor every where King and Country, and the Sailor's whose bravery patriotism could never be extinguished, rescued the Realm which they and whose children had to succour!—For Truth! Plagiarism! their Sea Countrymen and their own Home, and seemed determined to sacrifice the nation and themselves, rather than listen to the dictates of reason and conscience."

The present Drama, whilst it presents a true picture of the Mutiny, which for a time, captured the nation of its truest and proudest defence, the Bulwark of its Wooden Walls, faithfully portrays the abandonment of the right cause in the blind frenzy of Rebellion, their assumption of superiority to their first acknowledgement of Discipline, Duty and Order, alone that proud, manly spirit of confidence and which under the wayward and perverted use of Rum, who is the Head and the Pride of the British Sailory, must proceed inevitably in insults to the service itself, and consequently, in value to the Country at large.

ROYAL KINGDOM OF LILLIPUTS

On a scale overall with life. The Figures are habited in strict costume, move, speak, and act with a fidelity equal to human beings. Mr. Smith assures the public that his exhibition is entirely Theatrical, with the addition of many attached to it, that the Characters of the Plays are supported throughout by FIGURES ONLY, but with the strictest resemblance to Life. The greatest care has been taken in framing the Pieces, so that the morals of the younger branches may not be injured, and yet the more mature may witness these performances with pleasure. It has been established upwards of 100 years, and has given the most unqualified approbation, of which Mr. S. has received testimonials on very flattering terms, from the most dignified persons in the Kingdom. So conscious is he of obtaining public approbation, that he pledges himself to return the admission money where dissatisfaction is expressed.

PROGRAMME OF PIECES.

TRUE TO THE CORE!

WRITTEN BY A. R. SLOUS, ESQ.

The subject of my story is the dawn of England's glory,
When her scripling navy smote, with mortal stroke, the giant Spain;
And her laudsmen true and ready, show'd a front both bold and steady,
A front, whose'er a foeman comes, she'll surely show again.—Old Sea Song

On the afternoon of the 19th of July, A.D. 1588, a group of English Captains was collected at the Bowling Green, on the Hoe of Plymouth, whose equals have never, before or since, been brought together, even at that favourite mustering place of the heroes of the British Navy.—Creasy's Fifteen Decisive Battles of the World.

LONDON, THURSDAY EVENING, OCTOBER 5, 1865.

[The Proprietors of THE GLOWWORM have much pleasure in informing the audience of this Theatre that they are now able to supply their evening wants with the Programme of the Performances, and all the News of the Day.]

THE HOME SECRETARY has acceded to the petition and representations urged in behalf of Madame VALENTIN, and a pardon was received at Newgate last night for Mr. Jones, the Governor, who immediately ordered her discharge.

We receive intelligence dated New York, Sept. 23. The PRESIDENT has recently signed a great number of individual pardons, and a system is said to have been adopted whereby the application may be disposed of with great despatch. There are no further developments in relation to the trial of Mr. DAVIS. The WHIG trial still progresses. During the past few days additional testimony of cases of cruelty by the prisoner has been produced. The resolutions adopted at the various nominating conventions, both Democratic and Republican, throughout the North endorse the policy of President JOHNSON; and it seems almost that, whatever may be the result of even the elections, Mr. JOHNSON will receive the cordial support of the masses.

From MEXICO we learn that President JUAREZ has fixed his residence at El Paso del Norte, and he has been received there with much enthusiasm. General NEGRETE, with one hundred officers, had left for the interior for the purpose of collecting and disciplining recruits. General GONZALES ORTEGA was hourly expected at El Paso, where he is to assume the duties of the Constitutional Presidency. According to the Constitution of Juarez's term will expire on the 26th of November next, until which time ESTEBAN OCAMPO will act as Vice-President.

A man of the name of GILLINGS has been apprehended on the charge of having committed the Bromley murder.

The Kilsburgh Races were continued this morning.

The unfortunate girl was remanded in order that she might be brought before the Lambeth Police-court with attempting to cut her throat. The evidence showed that disappointed love was the cause of the attempt, and it is quite that, whatever may be the result of even the elections, Mr. JOHNSON will receive the cordial support of the masses.

NAVAL AND MILITARY.

We understand that Captain Gallon is about to resign his present appointment as Assistant Under Secretary of State for War, having been offered the post of Chief Inspector of Gunnery to the Board of Trade. His successor at the War-office has not been named, but it is expected that the vacancy will be filled up by promotion in the department.

The Duke of Cambridge left the residence of General Ellis at Dover, early this morning, and proceeded to Shorncliffe Camp, which his Royal Highness will inspect to-day. The Duke is expected to return to London this evening.

The death of Major-General Sir Maurice C. B., late commanding the Oudh Division, Lucknow, has been reported at the War-office.

Some interesting experiments with Mr. Beaubles's torpedoes took place at Chatham yesterday afternoon, in the presence of the Duke of Somerset and the Lords of the Admiralty. The sailing-vessel Terpsichore had been moored in the stream about two miles from the dockyard, and two of the small torpedoes, containing about 70lbs. of gunpowder, were placed under her. On the officers of each being apprised, the explosion which followed proved the value of Mr. Beaubles's invention. The old ship immediately heeled over on her side, and disappeared in the water. Larger torpedoes were afterwards exploded, which, although in deep water and embedded in the mud, threw up a column of water upwards of 200 feet into the air. A large crowd of boats of all kinds came out to witness the experiments, and it is said among those present that they were prevented from venturing within a dangerous distance of the torpedoes.

The ship Agincourt, built by Messrs. Laird of Birkenhead for the Government, was launched on the first-class of the steam-reserve at Devonport, and will shortly be removed from Hamoaze into Keyham Basin.

Advices from Malta, dated the 28th of September, state that a change in the weather had taken place, and much rain had fallen. The sirocco was also blowing in dreadful fury, no one having ventured in Valetta for three days. The total number of deaths among the troops in Malta was then 130. Her Majesty's ship Tyrian had sailed from Malta for Leghorn with mails for the East.

The following appointments and promotion were made at the Admiralty yesterday:—

Appointments.—Lieutenants—William G. Scott, Robert H. C. Lawson, and Charles J. Annes, to the Royal Adelaide.

Masters—Charles Hall, to the Reindeer; to the Reindeer.

Midshipmen.—Hon. E. A. T. Perry, to the Prince Consort.

Promotion.—To be First-class Assistant Engineer.—W. B. Cleverly.

GOSSIP.

We understand that the wisest Ribbon of the Order of St. Patrick is about to be conferred on the Earl of Dunkellan.

Professor Longfellow has recently completed an English blank verse version of the "Divina Commedia" of DANTE.

The "What Cheer House," at Ilchel in Sea Freestone, advertises among other attractions that it offers for the use of its inmates a well selected library of 5,000 volumes.

Gustave Doré's great undertaking, the Illustrated Bible—upon which he has been engaged for the last four years—is now nearly at completion. Messrs. Cassell, Petter, and Galpin have purchased the copyright for their sole and exclusive use in the English language, and their edition of the work for England and the Colonies will be shortly announced. The illustration will consist of 230 large page drawings, the cost of production having been upwards of £10,000.

Mr. Bernhard Hope's election expenses at Stoke-upon-Trent are returned at £5,024 9s. 9d. The expenses of Mr. Adderley and Lord Ingestre in the North Staffordshire contest were £7,139 7s. 6d. and £7,139 7s. 6d. (£6,993 2s. 5d.

The Kreuz-Zeitung announces that the Procureur du Roi at Berlin is preparing to prosecute, according to the prescription of the European Code, the author of Napoleon's Will. The main object is to prevent the fraudulent composition of such named papers by persons who, under the pretext of worth-less-ness, excess of tartar, &c., without a drop of the juice of the grape.

In High-street, Marylebone, and its neighborhood, considerable improvements have recently taken place in the construction of the houses and the arrangements, in consequence of the losses on the estate, which is a portion of the property of the Duke of Portland, have been made. In High-street a large number of houses and shops have been built on the east side which are of a superior character to those which were formerly there, while the line of houses in Nottingham-street, leading from the High-street to Marylebone-street, adjoining, has been considerably widened. In other parts of Marylebone similar to those have fallen in similar improvements are taking place.

SUICIDE OF A WOMAN IN THE THAMES.

[THE DAY.]

This morning, between twelve and one o'clock, a woman named Esther Wilmott, aged twenty-nine years, committed suicide by jumping into the river under circumstances of singular deliberation. The deceased was a widow, but she lived with a young man at 4, Chalcraft-terrace, Lambeth, and might she warrant with him and others drinking at a public house. Upon the latter leaving home last midnight she went on before them, and turning aside near the Kidney-stairs, took off her bonnet and shawl. As he was passing she threw them at his head, turned round, and coolly jumped into the water. They obtained the oars of a boat and got her out in a few minutes. She was still alive, though quite insensible.

Mr. Jones, surgeon, was called to her, and he endeavored to restore consciousness, but without avail, and she died in half an hour. There appeared to be no motive for the suicide beyond an apparent wish to show her companions that she was not afraid to drown herself.

It is remarked by the police at the waterside, as a characteristic circumstance, that nearly every female who throws herself into the water is careful to divest herself of her bonnet and shawl, which are placed on the ground in such a manner as not to be in the least damaged.

THE TURF.

THE CAMBRIDGESHIRE.

BY PHILIP.

"Coming events cast their shadows before."

This race, set for the Houghton Meeting, has already attracted some attention, and a good many books are open on it, there being every prospect of a large field coming to the post. Glaucion at top is weighted with the 7th, the impost which I cannot think he has any hope of successfully bearing in the front rank in severe fighting. Sparkle, back him, and with such a strong party behind him as he has, he may not be lightly beyond that I have no faith for him. Bacchus is doing work, and if fit and wanted on the day will take some beating. Regalia, The Duke, Pitsham-lane, Zambesi, and Earl Arran are in the wager; of these I should alone stand The Duke, who, on his form with Orlando, is not out of the hunt; but I must look for a place in this division for the winner. Copenhagen was freely supported previous to the appearance of the weights, since which speculation he seems to have got his quietus; still, he will not stop a good hour yet. He was as fit as a pinhook last week, he ran at Stockbridge, and I yet entertain an idea that there are more unlikely things twirl heaven and earth than the resurrection of Copenhagen in the market.

Running down the list, Hesterian, 4 yrs, 7st 12lb, may escape my eye, for he is a good horse when well and fancied, and he made in his favour, your subscribers should Silas suit. Gemma, 3rd, 6st 7lb, is not over, with Bond and Frisian homes and has a chance to give Major Frisklin a turn to deserve. Ferrara, 3rd, 6st 7lb, is fancied by some of the Hill's stable. Count Cavour, 7st 4lb, is, to my thinking, better at this race than in the Cesarewitch. He ought to get within half the last year's City and Suburban. Zephyr is also another whose chance is more than even in the event than in the race. Of Merry Wife I hear good accounts. She has improved of late, and I fancy will shortly figure in the market, if not in the race. Aerolite is a good horse when trained; but the party were forestalled in the Great Eastern, and the pin put through his engagement. Lucifer, therefore, he may be left to his fate. Despite all one knows helping oneself is permissible. Lampoon is spoken of as Scott's second string to Glaucion; but this year's horse I cannot advise your subscribers to interfere with till Goodwin has got his hand on. Castrel I have had favorable accounts from my Newmarket correspondent, and his owner cannot complain if he does not win one of the minors of information I may add that I hold this horse's chance to be one of the best. Kitty Fisher's Pet, Sting, Lucy Glitters, Lucifer, and Lily Agnes, her best performance last year was beating Bridesmaid in a match across the flat at even weights—no mean performance. I have no doubt the daughter of Stockwell can take her part. Victory, 3 yrs, 6st 7lb, I have a great liking for, and it will not surprise me to see him turn out another of Hodgman's good things. Time will show.

I have touched somewhat lightly on this handicap, as no very definitive reviews have as yet taken place, and in many instances the result of the Cesarewitch will materially influence, owners giving a reliable guide to go by. Meanwhile, be good enough to keep your subscribers posted as to what's what the day. On Saturday I will forward you my final remarks on and selection for the Cesarewitch, with a list of the probable starters and the probable.

THE LOSS OF LIFE NEAR THE MANSION HOUSE.

CORONER'S INQUEST.—THE DAY.

At eleven o'clock Mr. Payne, Coroner for London and Southwark, opened an inquest in St. Bartholomew's Hospital on the body of Elizabeth Hall, aged 45 years, who had been run over by a van belonging to Messrs. Gilbey, wine merchants, of Cheapside.

Mr. Broughton attended to watch the case on behalf of the owners of the van.

Major Ashburner, R.A., was also in attendance to hear the evidence.

Mr. Inspector Foulger attended to watch the case on behalf of the City Police authorities.

The jury having answered to their names, and a foreman chosen, they proceeded to the dead-house to view the body, and on returning into the hall the following was taken:—

Edward Kiss, of 15, Woodstock-street, Notting-hill, said that he was out-boatswain to the Leander steam-tender. On Monday afternoon, about half-past four, he was standing in front of the public-house at the Mansion House. There are three cabriole altogether at that part of the thoroughfare. Whilst standing there he saw the deceased and another woman coming in the direction from Princes-street towards King William-street, and when within three yards of the cabriole he was standing at, she stood for fourteen seconds full briefly. Nothing touched them before they fell. One was a yard or two behind the other when they fell. The deceased's head received an injury. The wheel of the van appeared to go over the head of the first. The person going up was the same as John Bringenham was driving. He pulled up very short the moment the fore-wheel went over the body, and in pulling back the same wheel went over her head. The horses were in a walk. He could not say at the time Bringenham whether he was trying to pull up the horse before the wheel passed over the deceased's head, but he did so when the wheel went over her. Two police-constables came and picked her up between the two wheels.

By the Coroner: The wheel did not go right over her head, but nearly.

By Mr. Broughton: He believed that they stumbled at the same time. He did not notice that the driving boy was on the wheel of the van. He had frequently seen the deceased vans in greasy weather put on skids. He saw no act that he had noticed to censure. He saw no carelessness. The deceased's ladies, but not unnecessarily. It appeared to contain six half pipes of sherry.

Charles Hornblow, of 5, Strand-place, Strand-green, time keeper to Messrs. Gilbey, said that he was in the van. He was standing on the kerb, near the last witness, when he saw two persons fall. He saw the van drive towards the Mansion-house.

The inquiry was being proceeded with when we went to press, and the remainder of the evidence will be found in a later edition.]

BOROUGH OF THE TOWER HAMLETS REGISTRATION.—This morning Mr. W. Hall Torrell held his court for the revision of the list of voters for the Tower Hamlets borough, in the Court-house, Wellclose-square. The constituency in this borough is essentially Liberal, there being no political partisanship. The revising barrister's duties were rendered comparatively light; the only noticeable feature in the revision was the great increase in the number of voters as compared with last year's register, which is caused by the number of dwellings recently erected within the borough.

LATEST TELEGRAMS.

[REUTER'S EXPRESS.]

AMERICA.

(Per City of New York.)

NEW YORK, SEPT. 23 (Noon).

A vigorous political campaign is in progress throughout the country, and the interest manifested in the approaching elections is very great. The resolutions adopted at the various nominating conventions, both Democratic and Republican, throughout the North endorse the policy of President Johnson; and it seems indicated that, whatever may be the result of the elections, Mr. Johnson will be supported by a majority of the masses. There are, however, unmistakable indications that a formidable opposition will be developed in Congress. Radical leaders of both houses having distinctly announced their intention of vigorously opposing sweeping confiscation of rebel property and the enfranchisement of the negro. Against the adoption of such measures the President stands clearly committed.

THE CONVENTIONS.

The election of delegates to the North Carolina Reconstruction Convention, to be held on the 2nd of October, took place on the 21st inst. The result has not been announced. The military authorities had previously issued orders forbidding unlimited mass or others of any violent or illegal acts, or even in bearing camp during the election, except in case of necessity; but it was, however, enjoined upon all peaceable citizens to vote that order was preserved throughout the State. No disturbance was apprehended.

Governor Perry, of South Carolina, in a despatch to President Johnson, announces the repeal by the Convention of this State of the ordinance of secession. The governor's recommendation for officially recognising the abolition of slavery has been favourably received here, and will, it is supposed, be adopted, together with his recommendations for expelling representatives of the late rebel elections and for appointing officers by direct vote of the people.

The Alabama Reconstruction Convention has authorised Provisional Governor Parsons to order an election for members of Congress. The election for State officers and for county officials is to be held on the 6th of November, and the election for Congress men may, perhaps, be ordered some time in October.

The Republican State Convention of New York assembled at Syracuse on the 20th instant. General F. C. Barlow was nominated for Secretary of State, General Martindale for Attorney-General, Colonel Rowland for State Treasurer, and Thomas Hillhouse for Comptroller. These nominations were made unanimously. The resolutions adopted express confidence in President Johnson, an entire approval of his policy of reconstruction, and that the national debt shall not be allowed to repudiate, maintain that the national debt shall be held as a sacred obligation, but that no liabilities incurred in behalf of the rebellion shall be recognised. The proceedings of the Convention were enthusiastic but harmonious.

The Democratic Convention of Massachusetts met at Mailsone on the 19th inst., and nominated Hon. H. C. Hobart for Governor. The resolutions adopted condemn the President Johnson's reconstruction policy, pledge him support, denounce negro suffrage and the opposition to the same, and declare that a number of prominent speakers were present, their words of welcome to which with the resolutions. One speaker encouraged a general reduction in the tariff rates.

PARDONS TO REBELS.

The President has recently signed a great number of individual pardons, and a system is said to have been adopted whereby the signing of pardons is made a matter of mere despatch. It is reported that Mr. Johnson now only withholds pardon from persons against whom criminal proceedings are pending. The extreme clemency he has shown has resulted in conferring a number of the most influential leaders of the rebellion into vigorous and useful friends of the National Government, and their assistance in the work of reconstruction is generally recognised as valuable.

There are no further developments in relation to the trial of Mr. Davis.

THE WIRZ TRIAL.

The Wirz trial still progresses. During the past few days additional testimony of cases of cruelty on the part of the prisoner has been produced. The defence will open in a few days, and a large number of witnesses will be produced. Captain Wirz is said to be in a dying condition, and his long-continued ill health and weakness to lie upon a lounge. During yesterday's proceedings he became completely exhausted, and was with difficulty restored. He is said to be confident of establishing his innocence. Judge Advocate Chipman has produced an order from General Winder, addressed to Dr. Hopkins, showing that the Richmond authorities were made aware of the condition of the prisoners at Andersonville, that they had authorised General Winder to apply the needful remedies.

MEXICO.

Advices from El Paso, Mexico, to the 2nd inst., state that President Juarez was still there. General Negrete, with one hundred officers, had gone to the interior of Mexico, where he is collecting and disciplining recruits, and it was asserted that he would be able to raise quite a formidable force. The French Minister at Washington furnishes a letter from Juarez, which is published here, in which the Emperor's affairs are declared hopeless. The letter, which is dated El Paso, August 19th, after announcing the surrender of Matamoras, says, "Maximilian is now in Mexican territory, says—" The enemy, in bringing his strength into the field, has concentrated all his forces in a number of small bodies, distributing and occupying points of vantage, and not of allowing ourselves to be shut up in towns. It will be difficult for the enemy to follow us here, and should they do so, it will be without avail. They will not succeed in destroying the Government, which will only remove to some convenient point within the national territory; while they will have increased the distance to five hundred leagues from the capital of the so-called empire, in the defence of which, now that our forces are about to open an active campaign, they will be unable to assist. All the chiefs are of opinion that the time for attacking the enemy with success has arrived, for the reason of his weakness through his large distances over which his lines extend. I shall so be able to write to you, and confirm the correct-ness of calculations."

THIS DAY'S POLICE

WORSHIP-STREET.

(BEFORE JOHN DE ROS, ESQ., AND THE DEPUTY OF THE EAST END.)

Two persons were brought before Mr. Ellison by the police, for being found sleeping in the open air. It appeared that they had not any visible means of support, and were refused admission into the workhouse of Whitechapel.

The worthy magistrate, apparently very indignant, desired that one of the authorities of the workhouse should attend and explain.

Richard Sadler, acting or assistant porter at the porter's lodge, came instead, and in reply to Mr. Ellison's question why an admission had not been granted, said, "Because the casual ward was full."

Mr. Ellison: Then they should have been taken into the workhouse. By the way, every poor person desiring shelter has a right to it at a workhouse; that is fully understood as having been ordered by the Poor Law Board. Mr. Ellison read that portion of the clause relating thereto). If there is not room, sufficient room should be provided, and the guardians have not done their duty in neglecting it; the sooner such accommodation is ready for persons the better, and perhaps you will be good enough to tell them what I have said to you.

The matter then dropped.

CLERKENWELL.

A POLICE-SERGEANT CHARGED WITH ASSAULTING A FIREMAN.

Police-sergeant Henry Francis, 271 W, was summoned for assaulting Mr. George Bullard, a furniture dealer, of St. Luke's.

Mr. Ricketts, solicitor, of Frederick-street, Gray's Inn-road, appeared for the defendant.

The complainant stated when he took out the summons that there was a great deal more to say, but then, when attempting to go to his own house, the defendant took hold of him, and pushed him against the wheel of the fire-escape with such force that his ribs were broken. He also said that he had not given the defendant any provocation. To-day the complainant did not appear to support his case, and

Mr. Ricketts submitted that the summons was dismissed, he must ask for full costs, for it was not to be tolerated that officers who were only doing their duty should be subjected to such annoyance, and costly proceedings as that of having to defend their character and position every time that a person who was bit already chose to feel himself annoyed. The defendant had been in the force eight years, and this was the only complaint ever made, and he was well known at this court as a quiet, respectable, and trustworthy officer. Mr. (Mr. Ricketts), in using force, might call the attention of the court to the fact that he had no less than nine witnesses in attendance to disprove the complainant's statements.

The Magistrate said he would not remanded the defendant a well-conducted officer, and in dismissing the summons he should make an order on the complainant to pay to the defendant £2 2s. as costs.

THE BROMLEY MURDER.

APPREHENSION OF THE SUPPOSED MURDERER.—LATEST PARTICULARS.—THIS DAY.

The police, after the Government reward of £100, have been more actively engaged than ever after the alleged murderer of the man Thomas Underhue, the excavator who was so shockingly murdered by several men at Bromley, as already reported.

Yesterday morning Inspector Kerressey, of the K or Bow division, apprehended a navvy named Noah Gillings, who was examined last night at the Thames Police-court. Arbuthnot square. Stepney, before Mr. Paget, the presiding magistrate. Evidence was offered proving the identity of the prisoner, before the coroner for Middlesex, when the prisoner, who denied the charge, was remanded for a week.

The accomplice, Thomas Bolt, "Bob," is at Bristol, and it is fully expected that he has also been apprehended by this time.

MYSTERIOUS DEATH ON A RAILWAY.

Yesterday Dr. Lankester held an inquest at the Clarence Tavern, Seven Sisters'-road, near Holloway, on the body of George Hart, aged 30, a guard on the Great Northern Railway, on Friday night last, under very mysterious circumstances.

Elizabeth Hart, of Lowestoft, said she was the wife of the deceased, and that she was in the employ of their workingday. He left her last Monday week in order to get work in London as a labourer with his brother. She heard of his death on the following day.

Richard Osborne said he was an engine-driver on the Midland Railway. About half-past eleven on Friday night he was proceeding with a train from St. Pancras Station to Leicester, and when passing the 8.25 train from the Great Northern Railway saw the deceased in the six-foot. He narrowly escaped being knocked down by the engine of the 8.25 train. At the same time witness saw the 8.25 train into London approaching. Witness shouted to deceased to look out. At that moment deceased stepped on to the four-foot, on which the train was coming, and it crushed him.

Mr. Francis Blackburn stated that on last Monday week the deceased came to him and wanted work. He obtained work on Friday morning last, and left for another man. Witness found that he left work at twelve o'clock that day and never returned. He was a steady man when he went out and kept himself, although he had an address of where he lived with his brother.

John Knapp, a signalman, searched the body of deceased, and found in an empty purse and some odd bits of paper.

Dr. Cotton deposed to being called to see the body of deceased. He was lying on his back in the six-foot. He had sustained severe injury to the head, the back part of the skull being smashed in and the brains protruding. A large quantity of blood had escaped from the wound. The cause of the death was fracture of the skull and laceration of the brain.

The Coroner and jury thought it most mysterious that deceased having just got work should absent himself after a few hours, and that no means were known as to how he got on the line.

Ultimately a verdict of "Accidental death" was returned.

To show the comparative value of slavery and freedom to a country, Georgia, a slave state, in 1860 had $6,650,480 acres of land, valued according to the report of the census at 137,587,752 dollars. In the same year, Illinois, a free state, had 16,252,928 acres, of the value of 853,712,176 dollars.

CITY

TWO O'CLOCK.

FURTHER UPWARD MOVEMENT IN THE BANK RATE OF DISCOUNT.

The Directors of the Bank of England, at their weekly court held this morning, have decided upon raising the minimum rate of discount from 8 per cent., to which point it was raised on Monday, to 9 per cent. This advance of 1 per cent., following so close upon the two previous advances of 1 per cent., has created a feeling of excitement and considerable discussion in the City. The position of the Bank, as shown by the figures in the return to be published this evening will, no doubt, fully justify the directors in the stringent measure which has been adopted, and the evident determination on their part to raise the foreign exchanges to a point that will attract bullion, as well as thoroughly check the speculation that was commencing in the Liverpool Cotton Market. At this movement was altogether unexpected, the bankers and brokers are mainly puzzled how to act, and refuse to work with anything like freedom, even at the advanced rate. On the Stock Exchange short loans are in demand at ½ to ¾ per cent., the supply of money in this quarter also being very limited.

The value of all classes of securities has of course suffered, and the market closes very flat, at an average fall of ¼ per cent.

Consols are now quoted 89½ to 9 for money, and 89 to ½ for October account.

Foreign Stocks are heavy, at the following quotations:—Mexican, 20½ to 6; Do. New, 24½ to ⅝; Turkish Consolids, 50½ to ¾; Do. Five per Cent. 44 to ½; Spanish Passive, 19½ to ¾; Ditto Certificates, 14½ to ½; Dutch, 65¼ to ½; Confederate, 6¼ to 7½ and Brazilian Scrip ¾ to ½ prem.

English Railway Stocks and Shares are without any feature in the general movement. London and North Western, 125 to ½; South Western, 114½ to ¾; Midland, 124¼ to ½; Brighton, and Yorkshire, 120 to ½; Metropolitan, 136½ to 7; and Great Northern A, 141½ to ¾.

Alliance Bank Shares are dull at 61 to ½ per cent.

Bank of London Shares are steady. Railway Market, Great Western of Canada have reacted to 15½ to 16; Luxembourg are steady at 15½ to ¾; and Dutch Rhenish at 8 to ¼ prem.

In American Securities Five-Twenty Bonds are quoted 69½ to ¾; Illinois Shares, 84½ to ¾; Erie, 66½ to ¾; Ditto Preferred 78½ to ¾ prem.; and Virginia 6's, 52 per cent. 45 to 6.

Home Shares are steady. Crédit Mobilier are firm, at 4¾ to 5 prem.; London Finance, 8¾ to ¾ prem.; General Credit, 1¾ to 2 prem.; and Financial Reform, 2¾ to 3 prem.; Peninsular, 1¾ to 2 prem.

Two FATAL ACCIDENTS.—This morning Mrs Emma Hurdiss, daughter of Mr. Hurdiss, coal merchant, Edgware-road, expired from the effects of severe burns, occasioned by her dropping off to sleep last night while reading in bed, when the candle by the light of which she had been reading fell, and ignited the bedding. A little boy, aged four years, son of Mr. Richardson, carver and gilder, Brecknock-street, Camden Town, swallowed a peach-stone this morning. It stuck in his gullet, and before surgical assistance could be obtained he was suffocated.

DION BOUCICAULT.

The action takes place on the western shores of Ireland, in the year 1691, at the moment when the Irish-French army of James the Second surrendered to the Anglo-Dutch troops of William of Orange. The Rapparees were a wild guerilla force employed to harass the movements of the Williamites. The word signifies the half of a pike, or a bludgeon: its application seems to denote the rude kind of weapon with which these irregular troops were armed.

SHAKESPEARE'S TRAGEDY OF MACBETH.

THE success which attended the production of King John, in 1852, at the Princess's Theatre, encouraged me to attempt another Shakesperian revival on the same scale, in the ensuing season, Macbeth was consequently acted on the 14th of February, 1853. The following remarks published at that time are now reprinted.

The very uncertain information, which we possess respecting the dress worn by the inhabitants of Scotland in the eleventh century, renders any attempt to present this tragedy attired in the costume of the period a task of very great difficulty. I hope, therefore, I may not be deemed presumptuous, if I introduce a few words upon the subject, and endeavour to explain upon what authorities I have based my opinions.

In the absence of any positive information handed down to us upon this point, I have borrowed materials from those nations to whom Scotland was constantly opposed in war. The continual inroads of the Norsemen, and the invasion of Canute, in 1031, who, combining in his own person the sovereignty of England, Norway, and Denmark, was the most powerful monarch of his time, may have taught, at least, the higher classes, the necessity of adopting the superior weapons and better defensive armour of their enemies; for these reasons I have introduced the tunic, mantle, cross gartering, and ringed byrnie of the Danes and Anglo-Saxons, between whom it does not appear that any very material difference existed; retaining, however, the peculiarity of "the striped and chequered garb," which seems to be generally admitted as belonging to the Scotch, long anterior to the history of this play; together with the eagle feather in the helmet, which, according to Gaelic tradition, was the distinguishing mark of a chieftain. Party-coloured woollens and cloths appear to have been commonly worn among the Celtic tribes from a very early period.

Diodorus Siculus and Pliny allude to this peculiarity in their account of the dress of the Belgic Gauls; Strabo, Pliny, and Xiphilin, record the dress of Boudicea, Queen of the Iceni, as being woven chequer-wise, of many colours, comprising purple, light and dark red, violet, and blue.

We have every reason to believe that the armour and weapons of the date of Macbeth were of rich workmanship.

Harold Hardrada, King of Norway, is described by Snorre as wearing in the battle with Harold II., King of England, A.D. 1066, a blue tunic, and a splendid helmet. The Norwegians not having expected a battle that day, are said to have been without their coats of mail.

This mail appears to have been composed of iron rings or bosses, sewn upon cloth or leather, like that of the Anglo-Saxons. Thorlet, a young Icelandic, or Norwegian warrior of the tenth century is mentioned in the Eyrbiggia Saga as wearing a most beautiful dress; that his arms, and equipments were extremely splendid.

The seals and monuments of the early kings and nobles of Scotland represent them as armed and attired in a style similar to their Anglo-Norman contemporaries. Meyrick, in his celebrated work on ancient armour, gives a plate of Alexander I., who commenced his reign in 1107 (only fifty years after the death of Macbeth), and there we find him wearing a hauberk, as depicted in Saxon illuminations, over a tunic of red and blue cloth.

The Earl of Huntingdon, who succeeded Alexander, under the title of David I., is represented on horseback, in his seal, wearing a tunic to the knee, which Lieut.-Col. C. H. Smith (one of our most distinguished authorities, to whom I am deeply indebted on this, as on many former occasions), in his work on the ancient costume of England, describes as being party-coloured. In the same volume he gives the figure of a Scotch knight of the time of Edward I., 1306, who holds a spear of a leni-shaped blade; on his head he wears a small skull-cap of steal, like some of the ancient Anglo-Saxon warriors of the eleventh century, and he is habited in a surcoat of cloth descending to the knee very much resembling a kind of kilt. Siward, Earl of Northumberland, and his son, who with their followers, were despatched by King Edward the Confessor, to the aid of Malcolm, I have equipped in the leathern suits called Corium or Corietum, which were introduced among the Saxons in the ninth century, and are described as having been worn by Earl Harold's soldiers in 1063, in his war with the Welsh. In the Life of St. Columba, written in Latin by Adomnan, one of his successors, we are told that the [illegible] were covered in the skins of beasts, though latterly they had woollen stuffs, made of wicker, or wands, woven on stakes, which were afterwards plastered with clay; and even the Abbey of Iona was built of the same rude materials.

Roderick, King of Strathclyde, is mentioned by Ducange as sleeping on a feather bed about this date, so that even in those primitive ages luxuries were known among the great.

In the four centuries and a half which intervened between the death of St. Columba and the reign of Macbeth, it is reasonable to presume that considerable improvement took place among the Scotch; and that the fashion of their dress and buildings was borrowed from their more civilized neighbours throughout the play. During the five centuries which preceded that event, the Anglo-Saxons made great advances, and erected many castles and churches of considerable importance; they excelled in iron work, and ornamented their buildings frequently with colour. On this subject I have availed myself of the valuable knowledge of George Godwin, Esq., F.S.A., of the Royal Institute of Architects, to whose suggestions I take this opportunity of acknowledging my obligation.

CHARLES KEAN.

LORD BYRON'S TRAGEDY OF

SARDANAPALUS

WILL BE REPEATED

To-Morrow (Saturday), and on Monday, Tuesday, and Thursday Next.

☞ The Free List will be Suspended on the Nights of "Sardanapalus."

In the production of Lord Byron's Tragedy of "Sardanapalus," I have availed myself of the wonderful discoveries made within the last few years, by Layard, Botta, and others, on the site of the ancient Nineveh. It was during the latest excavations, made by Mr. Layard, in the south-east palace of the Mount of Nimroud, that our illustrious countryman arrived at the conclusion that this interesting structure was the work of the son of Esar-haddon, who was himself the son of Sennacherib, so famous in sacred history. Although, says Mr. Layard, no part of the history of this royal builder has been as yet recovered, yet there is every reason to believe that this son of Esar-haddon was no other than the Sardanapalus, who, conquered by the Medes and Babylonians, under Cyaxares (B.C. 606), made one funeral pile of his palace, his wealth, and his wives.

To render visible to the eye, in connexion with Lord Byron's drama, the costume, architecture, and customs of the ancient Assyrian people, verified by the bas-reliefs, which, after having been buried for nearly three thousand years, have in our own day been brought to light, was an object that might well inspire the enthusiasm of one who has learnt that scenic illustration, if it have the weight of authority, may also, and add dignity to the noble works of genius.

I have humbly endeavoured to [illegible] an accurate portraiture and a living picture of an age long since past away, but once as famous as our own country has become for valour and power; and more intimately associated with the destructive wars of the Jewish race than any other people. palms have been spared to present to the eye the gorgeous and striking scenery, that has been so have been rigidly followed; and where recent discovery has failed to [illegible] the British Museum have, wherever it has been possible, borrowed, whether scenic or otherwise, I have diligently sought for [illegible] truth; and it is with some pride and satisfaction I am enabled to announce that a verdict of approval has been received from the Judge most competent to speak with authority upon the surpassingly interesting subject with which I have had to deal.

It is hardly necessary to remind the reader that Assyria and the country beyond the two rivers, the Tigris and the Euphrates, constituted, "if not actually the cradle of mankind, at all events the theatre on which the descendants of Noah performed their first conspicuous part. The plains of Shinar witnessed not only the defeat of that presumptuous enterprise which scattered them abroad upon the face of the earth, but also the exploits of the 'mighty Hunter,' and the triumph of his ambition, in the establishment of the first monarchy recorded either by sacred or profane writers." "More than two thousand years (says a modern writer, in recording the marvellous results of French and English discovery on the Assyrian plains) had Nineveh lain in its unknown grave, when a wandering English scholar and a French savant, urged by a noble inspiration, sought the seat of the once powerful empire, and, searching till they found the dead city, threw off its shroud of sand and ruin, and revealed once more to an astonished and curious world, the temples, the palaces, and the idols, the representations of war, and the triumphs of peaceful art of the ancient Assyrians. The Nineveh of scripture—the Nineveh of the oldest historians—the Nineveh, twin sister of Babylon, glorying in a civilisation of pomp and power, all traces of which were believed to be gone—the Nineveh in which the captive tribes of Israel had laboured and wept, was, after a sleep of twenty centuries, again brought to light. The long lost was found—the dead palaces were exhumed—the strange huge sculptures were dug out and their inscriptions deciphered. The proofs of ancient splendour were again beheld by living eyes, and, by the skill of the draughtsman and the pen of the antiquarian travellers, made known to the world Patience and industry rescued from the earth these treasures of a long gone people, giving proof of a great civilisation existing in the earliest stages of the history of the human race."

It is a note-worthy fact that, until the present moment, it has been impossible to render Lord Byron's tragedy of "Sardanapalus" upon the stage with proper dramatic effect, because, until now, we have known nothing of Assyrian architecture and costume. It is also worthy of remark that, interesting as the rescued bas-reliefs which have furnished such information are, they could not find dramatic illustration but for the existence of the only Tragedy that ever was reference to the period of which they treat. I consider myself fortunate in having been permitted to link together the momentous discoveries of one renowned Englishman with the poetic labours of another.

☞ Lord Byron having closely followed the history of Sardanapalus, as given by Diodorus Siculus, who has erroneously placed the site of the ancient Nineveh on the banks of the Euphrates, I have ventured to alter the text wherever this mistake is made, and have given the city its proper position on the river Tigris.

SARDANAPALUS.

In the production of Lord Byron's Tragedy of "Sardanapalus," I have availed myself of the wonderful discoveries made within the last few years, by Layard, Botta, and others, on the site of the ancient Nineveh. It was during the latest excavations, made by Mr. Layard, in the south-east palace of the Mount of Nimroud, that our illustrious countryman arrived at the conclusion that this interesting structure was the work of the son of Esar-haddon, who was himself the son of Sennacherib, so famous in sacred history. [illegible] accurate portraiture and a living picture of [illegible] as age long since past away, but once as famous as our own country for its civilisation and power; and [illegible] intimately associated with the destructive wars of the Jewish race than any other people. No [illegible] unexpectedly dug from the very bowels of the earth. The sculptures now in the British Museum have been rigidly followed; and where recent discovery has failed to give authority for minor detail, I have, wherever it has been possible, borrowed designs from surrounding nations, flourishing at the same epoch. In decoration of every kind, whether scenic or otherwise, I have diligently sought for truth; and it is with some pride and satisfaction I am enabled to announce that a verdict of approval has been received from the judge most competent to speak with authority upon the surpassingly interesting subject with which I have had to deal.

It is hardly necessary to remind the reader that Assyria and the country beyond the two rivers, the Tigris and the Euphrates, constituted, "if not actually the cradle of mankind, at all events the theatre on which the descendants of Noah performed their first conspicuous part. Bluff King Hal,	a young Gentleman celebrated for drawing the long bow—and very fond of Love and Inconstancy, and of Oysters: upon whom, daily, dulcified Matrimonial Squabbles so much that, in order to cut such matters short, he cut off his wives' heads! this surest young gentleman will be performed by	Mr HONEY
Wools-cye	a Man deep read (and) and ready for anything, and one who flatters himself, whatever other people may think, that as to not "a shocking bad hat"	Mr PAULO
Sweet William	an Archer, and in order that Archer as we see—does prime the aim a young Man of hearts, which Misses he seldom misses, being himself a perfect bow (beau)	Mr BOLOGNA
Herald	(a Gentleman who seems proud of blowing his own Trumpet) Mr HENRY
Lilla	(a young Lady, who, having a Lover named WILLIAM, cares not how often her Bill becomes due) Miss PAWCETT
The Nurse	(A very essential lady in the Domicile of Ladies who love their Lords) Mrs. CAUDLE.

HAL'S WIVES.

Katherine of Arragon	(a Spout far above proof)	Miss BRANDYFACE
Anne Boleyn	(Left, celebrated for our great beauty and fine neck, and for her having preferred a Chop to a Spoke.	Miss GINSLING.
Jane Sey-mour	(whom we never shall see more)	Miss DOUBLE-SIGHT.
Anne of Clevor	(the Maid of Marry of Flanders)	Miss GALLOWAY
Catherine How-ard	(and how hard her fate was every fool knows)	Miss SOFTLOVE.

IMMORTALS.

Cupid	a sort of Boarding School Jack Sheppard, who steals one every bosom, and in spite of your pluck steals away your heart	Mademoiselle LE CLERCQ
Hymen	(a Double-dealer, who promises more than he performs, and, though not always a Pagden, never a patron of the "Ring"	Miss KENWORTHY
Handiness	(an Ignes Fatuus, run aker by all, but overtaken by none—a Young Lady who never seems to refuse your invitation, but, who seldom makes the promised visit	Miss WILKINSON
Discord	(no familiar to every family to need any minute description)	Mr WYNN

COURT OF KING'S BENCH.—Dec. 21.

BREACH OF PROMISE OF MARRIAGE.

The Lord Lieutenant having announced at the forenoon of the last week, that Tuesday, the ensuing day, would be the last day of the Term, the Court of Exchequer had been accompanied in the early part of the forenoon by the several Judges of Nisi Prius, of Queen's Bench, and Common Pleas, and the Court was filled at an early hour of the morning. The Judges entered a short time after, and ranged themselves in their usual places, in anticipation of the business of the day. The Court was filled to excess, and many persons were unable to gain admittance, and remained the greater part of the day in the passage. The Attorney-General, Mr. Plunket, Mr. Serjeant Lefroy, and a number of Barristers-at-law, were present.

The Attorney-General rose, and addressed the Court as follows:—My Lords, I am instructed by the learned Counsel who have been retained on the part of the Crown, to move your Lordships, that the Rules which have issued for the purpose of quashing the Indictments found against the Rev. Thomas Wade, and Mr. Hayes, for the murder of Mr. Hare, may be made absolute.

MR. SHOARD

Begs leave most respectfully to inform his Friends, the Patrons of this Theatre, and the Public in general, that he intends taking a

Benefit on MONDAY, Feb. 22, 1830,

When the Entertainments which have been selected for the occasion, he trusts will be found of that order to please all Parties; and as this is the age of Puff, Mr. S. will, if possible, do without it, as it is well known that it will be impossible, at the

REDUCED PRICES OF ADMISSION

To this Theatre, for him to be able to pay

Mr. KEAN, Mr. YOUNG, Mr. LISTON,

AND

MISS KEMBLE!

To display their Talents; neither will

THE SIAMESE BROTHERS

Be present on the above Evening; and unfortunately for Mr. S.

MONSIEUR CHABERT,

THE FIRE KING,

Having lately failed in his

CHALLENGE to the PROFESSORS of CHEMISTRY,

It will not be worth while to engage him; but, at the same time, if any kind Friend could persuade Messrs.

MATHEWS & YATES

To grant permission to

Mr. JOHN REEVE

To exhibit at this House, on the above Evening, it would be doing an essential service; and, at the same time, if not imposing too much upon good nature, try and persuade the above worthy Managers to allow their superdoop Actress,

MADEMOISELLE D'JECK

To perform in the grand Romance, called the

Royal Elephant of Siam

There is not the least doubt, but the Overflow from this Theatre would fill theirs; so, by that means, they could not be anything out of Pocket by granting the favor. And as it is not the intention of Mr. S. at present to announce what he intends playing on the occasion, 'tis hardly worth while his telling the Public that he does not intend to produce

THE BRIGAND,

It being the private Property of STEPHEN PRICE, Esq.; died not being acquainted with that Gentleman, cannot with any propriety ask him the favor to allow

"SWEET LOVE, ARISE." ... P. Henrion

SUNG by

Madame ANNA THILLON.

The celebrated Prima Donna, from the Imperial Opera Comique, at Paris.

Sweet love, arise while yet the night
Sheds o'er the skies yet fond of light,
Oh! see how clear shine out those stars;
And look! how rosy-eyed dear guiders
Now usher yet, each pause between,
Their sweet and melodious
And as I wait some fair reviving vision,
From crimes crown their fragrance shades.

Oh! come and grace you glittering arena,
Where all confine their art at a queen—
Loveliest in love's, lightest in heart,
Spain's Divine Sovereign outshines all!
Ah, ah, ah, ah! ah, ah, ah, ah!
Loveliest in love's, noblest in hall,
Ah, ah, ah, ah! ah, ah, ah, ah!
Spain's Queen, Queen of Queens all!

From Aragon, from fair Castile,
From proud Leon, from gay Seville;
Thence all that's brightest, and young and fair,
From each to-night throng dazzling there.
What eye on Earth so proud a glance?
What foot can flash so bold a dance?
Yes, fairest, they throughout all nations,
Not one can show a form like thine!

Then haste, and grace the glittering scene,
Where all confess thou shin'st the queen—
Mark! down the stair, light lingering now,
And, hark! hear—yet yet 'tis thine.
Ah, ah, ah, ah! ah, ah, ah, ah!
Hark! down the stair, light lingering now,
Ah, ah, ah, ah! ah, ah, ah, ah!
A step I hear—yes! yes! 'tis thine.

(ELEVENTH TIME)

COMPOSED FOR DOUBLE ORCHESTRA AND THREE MILITARY BANDS, ON ENGLISH, FRENCH, AND TURKISH MELODIES.

DESCRIPTION.

INTRODUCTION.—TIME OF PEACE.—The Drum and Trumpet of the Inhumaine of a Village, and the sound of the Hymn of the Peasants, answering each other. The Marriage of the Village Belle is ratified through the valley. Suddenly the Tocsin or Alarm Bell is heard across the plain of Bay, the Hymn of the Peasants, with its harsh reverberations. From the North and West the sound of the Tocsin or Alarm Bell is heard across the plain of Bay, the Hymn of the Peasants, themselves, and the tranquil inhabitants are roused from their peaceful occupations to prepare for the dreadful strife.

No. 1—THE FRENCH ARMY marches—Pas redoublé, and Diss.—"Partez Adieux."

No. 2—THE IRISH, SCOTCH, and WELSH REGIMENTS arrive and join the Forces.

No. 3—THE BRITISH ARMY assemble—Quick March.

No. 4—THE TURKISH MUSSULMAN—Modern hymn to Allah—sung from the towers of the Turkish Mosques, to excite the populace to defend the Standard of the "True Believers," is heard—Turkish War Marches.

No. 5—NIGHT.—BIVOUAC OF THE ALLIED ARMIES. During the slumbers of the weary Soldiers, their dreams are supposed to wander towards their distant fatherland, and the prayers for their safety are offered up in their friends at home, now in hearts about them. In the stillness of the night, the bells of the neighbouring villages mark the hour of Midnight—all is quiet, save the footsteps of the Sentinel. The Russian Force here hopefully, and the Allies are attacked by the Russian Army, and about the hour of the night against their forces. The advance of the Russians is heard in the distance, and the Allies are attacked by the Russian Army, and about the hour of the night against their forces. The Russians, soon discovered, returning to the camp, and concealed by the darkness of the night, severe several posts, but meeting with desperate resistance, they retire, and all again reigns with unusual fury. The English, who receive the first attack, are driven back, and the Russians, who were at first successful, are at length driven back, and the Allies, who were at first successful, are at length driven back, and the Allies, who were at first successful, are at length driven back, and the Allies

CONDITIONS OF SALE.

FIRSTLY.

That the highest bidder shall be the purchaser; and if any dispute arises between two or more bidders, the property shall be put up again at the last bidding.

SECONDLY.

That no person shall advance a less sum than £50 at each bidding, nor retract his or her bidding.

THIRDLY.

That the purchaser shall, immediately after the sale, pay into the hands of the auctioneer a deposit of £10 per cent., in part of his or her purchase-money, and sign an agreement for completing the purchase, and for payment of the remainder of the purchase-money on or before the 29th day of September next, at the offices of Messrs. Crosse & Son, the Solicitors for the vendor, situate in Hatton Court, Threadneedle Street, London, at which time and place the purchase is to be completed, and the purchaser is then to be let into possession, or receipt of the rents and profits. All outgoings will be cleared by the vendor to the said 29th day of September, and, in case the purchaser shall from any cause, not pay his or her purchase-money, on the said 29th day of September, then he or she shall pay interest, at £5 per cent per annum, on the residue of his or her purchase-money, from that time up to the time of actually completing such purchase.

FOURTHLY.

That, within fourteen days from the day of the sale, the vendor at his own expense, will deliver an abstract of his title to the purchaser, or his or her solicitor, subject to these conditions.

FIFTHLY.

The property in question (with the exception of a slip or piece of ground within the fence of the Gardens, part of a piece of ground containing 3 acres, 2 roods, 12 perches, which in the year 1817, was purchased by George Rogers Barrett and the Reverend Jonathan Tyers Barrett, of Sir Joseph Mawby), was purchased by a Mr. Bryant Barrett, some time previous to the year 1806, who devised the same by his will, dated the 15th of October, 1806, to certain persons therein named. The property was afterwards in the possession of Messrs. Gye & Hughes, who became bankrupts, under the flat against whom the vendor purchased it. And, as the vendor has no further or other title to the property sold previously to the will of the said Bryant Barrett, than that which will be disclosed in the abstracts, the purchasers shall not be entitled to call for any other title to the property sold previous to the date of such will, than that to be disclosed in the abstracts; and the vendor shall not be obliged to verify or prove the title to be disclosed in the abstracts, prior to the date of that will, either by the production of surrenders, admissions, or documents from the Court Rolls, or by any other evidence or proof whatever; and the title to be disclosed in the abstracts prior to the date of the will of the said Bryant Barrett, shall be accepted by the purchaser without any objection. An abstract of the vendor's title is left at the office of Messrs. Crosse & Son, the vendor's solicitors, for the inspection of any person or persons desirous to inspect the same prior to the sale.

SIXTHLY.

All objections to the title shall be made in writing, and left at the office of the said Messrs. Crosse & Son, the vendor's solicitors, within twenty-one days from the delivery of the abstract or abstracts, or in default thereof, the title shall be deemed to have been accepted.

SEVENTHLY.

When the property was sold in the year 1825, a sum of £2,200, part of the purchase-money, which was then paid for the property, was invested in the purchase of £2,406. 9s. 9d., £3 per cent. Consolidated Bank Annuities, in the names of two trustees, as an indemnity against a mortgage debt of £2,200 which was secured upon the property by a conditional surrender, made in the year 1787, and the trusts were declared by a deed made and executed on or about the 31st of March, 1825. These trusts have since been released by an indenture, bearing date some about the 13th day of July, 1826, which deed has been duly entered on the Court Rolls, and satisfaction entered thereon for the said mortgage debt. The purchaser is to be satisfied with the entry of the said deed on the Court Rolls, without requiring to have the said deed delivered to him, or a covenant for production thereof. And no objection is to be raised to the title, with respect to the payment of such mortgage debt, or any matter relating thereto.

EIGHTHLY.

That all attested copies of deeds or other documents, and all certificates of births, marriages, and deaths, and evidences of heirship, and all affidavits and declarations of identity, and of other facts and circumstances relating to the title, and all covenants for the production of deeds or other documents which shall be required by the purchaser, shall be furnished at his or her expense; and all recitals in deeds, surrenders, and other documents of 20 years' date, shall be conclusive evidence of the facts and circumstances therein recited, stated, or referred to, and also of the descriptions and title of all persons therein named or referred to; and the purchasers shall not be at liberty to require any further evidence than what appears in such recitals.

NINTHLY.

The property is sold subject to the payment, to the Lady of the Manor of Kensington, of the quit rents payable in respect thereof, (these are understood to be small quit rents, amounting, together, to £1. 3s. 7d., or thereabouts, and to the rights, if any, which the Lady of the Manor may have in the timber and ornamental trees; and no compensation shall be claimed by the purchaser, for or in respect thereof, or of the quit rents, payable in respect of the property, or any or either of them.

TENTHLY.

That, upon payment of the remainder of the purchase money, agreeably to the third condition, the vendor will, at the expense of the purchaser, make and execute to him or her, or as he or she may direct, proper surrenders and assurances; and the expense of all admissions, and the payment of all fines and fees required upon any surrenders or admissions, shall be borne by the purchaser.

ELEVENTHLY.

That the purchaser shall take, at a fair valuation, in the usual way, all the moveable buildings, machinery, fittings up, and other moveable effects, upon the premises belonging to the vendor, of which a list is left with the auctioneers, and also at the offices of Messrs. Crosse and Son, the vendors' solicitors; and the purchaser is to pay for the same at the time of completing the purchase.

TWELFTHLY.

That if any mistake be made in the description of the premises, or any other error whatever shall appear in the particulars of the estate, such mistake, or error, shall not annul the sale, but a compensation or equivalent shall be given or taken as the case may require; such compensation or equivalent to be settled by two referees, or their umpire, each party within ten days after the discovery of the error, and notice thereof given to the other party, to appoint one referee by writing; and in case either party shall neglect or refuse to nominate a referee within the time appointed, the referee of the other party may make a final decision. If two referees are appointed, they are to nominate an umpire before they enter upon business, and the decision of such referees or umpire (as the case may be), shall be final.

LASTLY.

That, if the purchaser shall neglect or fail to comply with the above conditions, his or her deposit-money shall be actually forfeited to the vendor, who shall be at full liberty to re-sell the property, either by public auction or private contract, and the deficiency (if any) occasioned by such second sale, together with all expenses attending the same, be immediately, after the same sale, made good to the vendor by the defaulter at this present sale; the whole thereof shall be recoverable by the vendor as and for liquidated damages; and it shall not be necessary previously to tender a conveyance to the purchaser.

That, within Fourteen days from the day of the Sale, the Vendors, at their own expense, will deliver an Abstract of their Title to the Purchaser, or his or her Solicitor, subject to these Conditions.

FIFTHLY.

The Property in question (with the exception of a slip or piece of ground within the fence of the Gardens, part of a piece of ground containing 3 acres, 2 roods, 12 perches, which, in the year 1817, was purchased by George Rogers Barrett and the Reverend Jonathan Tyers Barrett, of Sir Joseph Mawby,) was purchased by a Mr. Bryant Barrett, some time previous to the year 1806, who devised the same by his Will, dated the 15th of October, 1806, to certain persons, under whom the Vendors claim; and, as the Vendors have no further or other Title to the Property sold previous to the Will of the said Bryant Barrett, than that which will be disclosed in the Abstracts, the Purchasers shall not be entitled to call for any other Title to the Property sold previous to the date of such Will, than that to be disclosed in the Abstracts; and the Vendors shall not be obliged to verify or prove the Title to be disclosed in the Abstracts, prior to the date of that Will, either by the production of surrenders, admissions, or other documents from the Court Rolls, or by any other evidence or proof whatever; and the Title to be disclosed in the Abstracts prior to the date of the Will of the said Bryant Barrett, shall be accepted by the Purchaser without any objection. An Abstract of the Vendor's Title is left at the Office of Messrs. Hardwick & Davinson, the Vendor's Solicitors, for the inspection of any person or persons desirous to inspect the same prior to the Sale.

SIXTHLY.

All objections to the Title shall be made in writing, and left at the Office of the said Messrs. Hardwick & Davinson, the Vendors' Solicitors, within Twenty-one days from the delivery of the Abstract or Abstracts; or, in default thereof, the Title shall be deemed to have been accepted.

SEVENTHLY.

When the Property was sold in the year 1825, a sum of £2,300, part of the Purchase Money which was then paid for the Property, was invested in the purchase of £2,466, 9s. 9d. £3 per cent. Consolidated Bank Annuities, in the names of two Trustees, as an Indemnity against a Mortgage Debt of £2,300, which was secured upon the Property by a Conditional Surrender, made in the year 1787, and the Trusts were declared by a Deed made and executed on or about the 31st March, 1825. These Trusts have since been released by an Indenture, bearing date on or about the 15th day of July, 1826, which Deed has been duly entered on the Court Rolls, and satisfaction entered thereon for the said Mortgage Debt. The Purchaser is to be satisfied with the entry of the said Deed on the Court Rolls, without requiring to have the said Deed delivered to him, or a Covenant for production thereof. And no objection is to be raised to the Title, with respect to the payment of such Mortgage Debt, or any matter relating thereto.

EIGHTHLY.

That all attested Copies of Deeds or other Documents, and all Certificates of Births, Marriages, and Deaths, and Evidences of Heirship, and all Affidavits and Declarations of Identity, and of other facts and circumstances relating to the Title, and all Covenants for the production of Deeds or other Documents which shall be required by the Purchaser, shall be furnished at his or her expense; and all recitals in Deeds, Surrenders, and other Documents of 20 years' date, shall be conclusive evidence of the facts and circumstances therein recited, stated, or referred to, and also of the descriptions and title of all persons therein named or referred to; and the Purchasers shall not be at liberty to require any further evidence than what appears in such recitals.

NINTHLY.

The Property is sold subject to the payment, to the Lord of the Manor of Kennington, of the Quit Rents payable in respect thereof, (these are understood to be small Quit Rents,) amounting, together, to £1. 3s. 7d., or thereabouts, and to the rights, if any, which the Lord of the Manor may have in the Timber and Ornamental Trees; and no compensation shall be claimed by the Purchaser, for or in respect thereof, or of the Quit Rents, payable in respect of the Property, or any or either of them.

TENTHLY.

That, upon payment of the remainder of the Purchase Money, agreeably to the Third Condition, the Vendors, and also the Mortgagees, will, at the expense of the Purchaser, make and execute to him or her, or as he or she may direct, proper surrenders and assurances, and the expense of all admissions; and the payment of all fines and fees required upon any surrenders or admissions, shall be borne by the Purchaser; but the Vendors, being Assignees, will not enter into any Covenants for Title, or other Covenants, save the usual Covenant against Incumbrances.

ELEVENTHLY.

That the Purchaser shall take, at a fair valuation, in the usual way, all the moveable buildings, machinery, fittings up, and other moveable effects, being in, upon, and about the Premises, of which a List is left with the Auctioneer, and also at the Offices of Messrs. Hardwick & Davinson, the Vendors' Solicitors; and the Purchaser is to pay for the same at the time of completing the purchase, together with the expenses of such valuation.

TWELFTHLY.

That, if the Purchaser shall neglect or fail to comply with the above Conditions, his or her Deposit Money shall be actually forfeited to the Vendors, who shall be at full liberty to re-sell the Property, either by Public Auction or Private Contract, and the deficiency (if any) occasioned by such second sale, together with all expenses attending the same, be immediately, after the same sale, made good to the Vendors by the Defaulter at this present sale: the whole thereof shall be recoverable by the Vendors as and for liquidated damages; and it shall not be necessary previously to tender a Conveyance to the Purchaser.

LASTLY.

That, if any mistake be made in the Description of the Premises, or any other error whatever shall appear in the Particulars of the Estate, such mistake, or error, shall not annul the sale, but a compensation or equivalent shall be given or taken, as the case may require; such compensation or equivalent to be settled by two referees, or their umpire, each party within ten days after the discovery of the error, and notice thereof given to the other party, to appoint one referee by writing; and, in case either party shall neglect or refuse to nominate a referee within the time appointed, the referee of the other party may make a final decision. If two referees are appointed, they are to nominate an umpire before they enter upon business, and the decision of such referees or umpire (as the case may be) shall be final.

UNDER THE ESPECIAL PATRONAGE OF HIS MAJESTY,

ROYAL GARDENS, VAUXHALL.

AN INTERESTING AND UNIQUE

GALA

WILL TAKE PLACE

ON MONDAY, 19th of AUGUST, 1833,

FOR THE BENEFIT OF

Mr. SIMPSON,

MASTER

THE CEREMONIES

OF THE

Royal Gardens, Vauxhall,

UPWARDS

THIRTY-SIX YEARS.

MR. SIMPSON'S OWN ADDRESS TO THE PUBLIC.

To the most illustrious Princes and Princesses of the British Empire; to their Excellencies, the most noble and puissant Princes, and other illustrious Ambassadors of the Foreign States, now residing in London, and their truly noble and accomplished Ladies; to the most noble and distinguished Nobility of the United Kingdom, and their truly noble and accomplished Ladies; and also to all the other respectable classes of distinguished Visitors, that so kindly honor and grace the Royal Gardens every Season with their distinguished presence, and their amiable and lovely Ladies.

To all those truly illustrious, noble, and distinguished Visitors of the Royal Gardens, Vauxhall, their truly humble and very devoted Servant, C. H. Simpson, Master of the Ceremonies of those Gardens for Thirty-six Years, most dutifully and most respectfully begs to inform all the illustrious, noble, and all the other respectable classes that visit the Royal Gardens, that, for my humble services, for so long a period, in the truly honorable service of the Public, the very kind generosity of the worthy Proprietors of these Gardens have been pleased to permit (on my own sole account) an unprecedented occurrence, that never in the whole annals of the Gardens took place at the Royal Gardens before, namely (a Benefit). I therefore, with all due and humble submission, and filled with the most dutiful and sincere expressions of heartfelt attachment, presume, with all becoming awe, to approach such illustrious, noble, and distinguished Personages, and with every sense of the most profound humility, confidently relying on the paternal disposition of the generous Public to an old servant, at one of the first places of Public Amusement in the first City in the Empire, this celebrated splendid ancient Temple of loyalty, where the most lovely British and Foreign beauties congregate under the same happy roof to enjoy the pleasure of each other's company; and where I have had the HIGH HONOR of receiving his late Majesty, George IV. when Prince of Wales, and Royalty, Rank, Fashion, and Elegance, to the present moment, and am now in the Sixty-third Year of my Age.

On this gratifying conviction, most illustrious, noble, and distinguished Personages, and all the other respectable parts of a generous Public, I very humbly rest my hopes, that your well-known unparalleled goodness of heart will graciously receive, not only with indulgence, but with favor, the humble yet earnest request, which I now, in the most dutiful manner, presume to lay at your feet.

Such condescension of such illustrious, noble, and distinguished Patrons, I should hail as the sure harbinger of my future happiness, assured that the patronage and the presence of such truly-illustrious, noble, and distinguished Visitors, on the 19th of August, the Night of my Benefit, would essentially promote the prosperity of my future days as long as I live.

I also very dutifully beg to make known to the distinguished Visitors, that neither pain nor expense will be spared in putting the whole Gardens into a state of unequalled splendor, and fitting-up every part in order to render the Night worthy of their illustrious patronage; and every Device worthy of such a distinguished occasion.

I also very respectfully beg leave to make known, that I am one of the very few survivors, at the present day, of that bloody and furious battle, that lasted from day-light in the Morning until dark, fought by Admiral Rodney, in the West Indies, on the 12th of April, 1782, when the British standard completely annihilated and destroyed the whole French Fleet, and, among the captured ships, was the celebrated Ville de Paris, a tremendously high red-sided, 90 gun ship, with a gilt lion at her head, and took their grand Commander in Chief, the Count de Grasse, a fine tall stout athletic man, about 5 feet 11 inches high, prisoner. For like His present Majesty, and for the same time as His Majesty, I began some of my earliest days in the honorable profession of the Royal Navy; for when I was eleven years of age, the Gallant Captain Sir James Wallace, who was a friend of my father, took me on board of his ship the Warrior, 74 gun ship, as an acting Midshipman, which was then at Portsmouth, and immediately set sail for the West Indies, to every Island of which we were cruising about, until the great battle took place on the 12th of April, 1782. We then went to North America, then back to the West Indies. When at St. Lucia, on the 10th of March, 1783, a Packet of Peace arrived to inform us that a ratification of Peace had taken place between Britain, France, Spain, and America, when our ship immediately set sail for Old England, with joyous hearts, and arrived at Portsmouth the latter end of April, 1783. The ship was paid off; and I was, like other young gentlemen in my situation, honorably discharged in the thirteenth year of my age; and had been always very much beloved and respected by all the officers on board the ship, and so much so, that Captain Stone of the Royal Navy, the brother of Mr. Stone, the Master of our ship, wrote a letter to his Brother from the East Indies, stating that he would give all the world if he could but have me with him on board his 74 gun ship in the East Indies.

All these reasons will, I earnestly hope, induce all the illustrious, noble, and distinguished Visitors to be graciously pleased to condescend to patronise my earnest prayer for your distinguished support on the Night of my Benefit; as I do assure you, most illustrious, noble, and distinguished Ladies and Gentlemen, it will truly gladden the heart, for the remainder of his days, of your most submissive, humble, and devotedly faithful Servant, at your command, in the Sixty-third Year of his Age; and shall never, while I live, cease to testify my gratitude for the same.

I have the honor to remain, most illustrious, noble, and distinguished Personages,

With every sense of the most profound respect,

Your very grateful and devoted humble Servant,

ROYAL GARDENS, VAUXHALL,
August, 1833.

C. H. SIMPSON.
Master of the Ceremonies, Royal Gardens, Vauxhall.

ROYAL GARDENS, VAUXHALL.

The PRICE of ADMISSION.

In giving Notice of the commencement of the Entertainments at these Gardens, the Proprietors think it right to preface their Bill of Fare, by announcing, perhaps, the greatest Feature that ever attended the opening of this Unique Place of Amusement; and which, it is presumed, will both gratify and surprise the Patrons of Vauxhall.

Many valued Friends have suggested the propriety of considerably reducing the Price of Admission, a step which the Lessees of this great Establishment would appear to altogether forbid; but anxious to try the Experiment of affording every Class of Persons the opportunity of enjoying this highly favored Summer Resort, the Proprietors have determined to throw open their Doors at with increased Attractions, rather than otherwise. They refer with pride to the Catalogue of their Amusements, and even these exertions shall be exceeded by those in prospective. The Proprietors have done more than their duty to the Public, and look with confidence to the Public for a reward for all their labors.

THE GARDENS WILL OPEN

NEXT WEDNESDAY, JUNE 15, 1858,

Under the direct Patronage of Her Most Gracious Majesty,

AND CONTINUE OPEN EVERY

Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday, and Friday, during the Season.

During the winter the Proprietors have devoted all their energies to the general improvement and embellishment of the above Establishment, and they trust that the arrangements for the present Season will meet with that approbation hitherto so liberally bestowed on all their efforts to please. With a view to give every possible accommodation to the Public, and in consequence of the suggestions of many friends and patrons of the Gardens, the Entertainment will commence and terminate earlier than heretofore, thereby making the Gardens healthy as a Country to enjoy an evening's recreation at Vauxhall, and return home at an early hour. The Gardens will be opened at Half-past Seven, and the Fire Works exhibited at Half-past Ten.

The principal Amusements consist of

THE CONCERT,

In the open Orchestra, of Vocal and Instrumental Music, which will commence at Eight o'Clock.

A VIEW OF LONDON FROM THE THAMES, from Southwark Bridge, taken during the severe frost.

The whole Painted by Mr. COCKS.

THE ITALIAN WALK, 800 Feet in Length,

Will be thrown open, and a new VIEW OF DOMODOSSOLA, in Italy, will be shown at one extremity; and at the other are Two Colossal Statues of His Grace the Duke of Wellington and Napoleon Buonaparte.

THE GARDENS

Will be decorated with Fountains, Statuary, and many Trifles, each too numerous to mention, will be found in different parts.

THE ILLUMINATIONS

Will be on an increased scale of Splendour, and include

A GRAND COMPLIMENTARY DEVICE,

Prepared expressly for the Opening Night.

THE

FIRE WORKS

Will be under the sole superintendance of Mr. D'ENNY, who being paid a large additional sum for the present Season, will be entitled to produce a Display such as never has been witnessed in this Country.

The unrivalled MILITARY BAND of the Surrey Yeomanry, under the Direction of Mr. Wallis, as well as a First-rate Quadrille Band, are engaged,

And will perform after the Fire Works as well as during the Evening.

Refreshments of all kinds may be had in the Gardens at the most moderate Charges.

Mr J. W. VALINTINE
And Mr M. C. LUDLOW.

JUBA

Is a genuine Son of the Southern clime, & is the Only Youth of Colour that has ever visited this Country for the purpose of delineating

NEGRO LIFE AND CHARACTER.

HE IS THUS IMMORTALISED BY

CHARLES DICKENS in his American Notes:—

"suddenly the lively Hero dashes in to the rescue. Instantly the fiddler grins, and goes at it tooth and nail; there is new energy in the tambourine; new laughter in the dancers; new brightliness in the very candles. Single shuffle, double shuffle, cut and cross-cut; snapping his fingers, rolling his eyes, turning in his knees, presenting the backs of his legs in front, splitting about on his toes and heels like nothing but the man's fingers on the tambourine; dancing with two left legs, two right legs, two wooden legs, two wire legs, two spring legs—all sorts of legs and no legs—what is this to him? And in what walk of life, or dance of life, does man ever get such stimulating applause as thunders about him, when, having danced his partner off her feet, and himself too, he finishes by calling for something to drink, with the chuckle of a million of counterfeit Jim Crows, in one inimitable sound."

FIRST APPEARANCE OF

whitest clown and master of the ring, there is now an elegant theatre, and a ballet supported by first-rate choregraphs from the grand opera at Paris. The scenery is beautifully painted, and the costumes are appropriate and picturesque. Madlle. Pieron, the principal Dancer may be placed in the foremost rank of the celebrities of the ballet. The festal scene with which it finishes is of surpassing brilliancy and excited the audience to a furor of delight."

MORNING HERALD, JULY 22nd.

This famous haunt has opened this year under circumstances of unusual brilliancy. The management of Mr. Wardell has assumed a most liberal and tasteful character, and with correspondent advantage to the interests of the 'Royal property' as well as to its future prospects. For some years past Vauxhall has waned grievously in reputation, and this degeneracy of character was easily referable to the grossnesses of public conduct which places of this kind inevitably admit of, if there is a laxity in the official vigilance, and if in the sentiment of the entertainments provided. There can be no reason why an agreeable retreat like Vauxhall should not be patronized, respectably as well as copiously—why families should not be permitted to saunter its time-honoured arcades without witnessing the insulting and repugnant immoralities which were once so common. There can, in short, be no good reason why a place so favourably adapted for garden decoration and for all those adventitious adjuncts which ingenious and fanciful illumination embraces, should not be so conducted as to be a credit to the metropolis rather than a disgrace. It is therefore much to the honour of Mr. Wardell, and his present coadjutors, that an effort has been made to purge Vauxhall of its recent plague-spot, and restore to it the unblemished fame which it was once its privilege to possess. That success will attend an enterprise influenced by this spirit there can be little doubt, for the public are soon alive to worthiness of intention, and are seldom indisposed to aid it by their countenance.

The aspect of the place has experienced considerable improvement. The whole of the extensive area has been subjected to embellishment, and some of the pictorial effects, which enter so largely into the scheme, are both beautiful and attractive. The long range of supper boxes on the right [illegible] instant view of the lake of Lucerne is discernible; while every nook available for a set scene is planted with a landscape tableau just as neatly executed, as brilliantly lit; in addition to which the compartments of the various edifices in the gardens are painted with subjects a la Watteau, &c., producing, in combination with the flowers, the statuary, and the illuminated fuchsias which hang from the trees in the open parts of the garden, an ensemble exceedingly varied, elegant, and pleasing. The kaleidescopian refractors of Herr Gebricke, which stands in the area at the rear of the orchestra, presents, by the simplest possible means, immense radii of coloured lights, multiplied so profusely and with such a uniform vividness as to suggest the possibility of this ingenious optical arrangement, consisting merely of a single gas-burner and concentric reflectors, becoming a desirable railway signal. The miscellaneous diversions consists of a ballet, which takes place in the old rotunda, fitted up prettily for the purpose; a moving diorama of the Arctic regions, the national dances of a group of Arabian females; a vocal and instrumental concert; a military band; and last, but not least, a magnificent display of fireworks. The ballet is very gaily mounted, and the activities of Mdlle. Pieron, who comes fresh from the Academie Royale, are made abundantly manifest in the little Calabrian story which constitutes the subject of the divertissement. The concert in the open air, that never-to-be abandoned feature of the 'Royal property,' is under the direction of M. Arban, who has engaged setted good average vocalists, among them M. Jonghmans, whose steutorian voice is just the thing for out-of-door singing.

The general programme, therefore, is liberal and inviting; and as there is no halt in the entertainments, the attention of the audience is kept alive until midnight, when the fireworks terminate the more intellectual side of the undertaking. The long series of wet evenings has had, of course, an injurious effect upon the attendances, but the reverse, from the opposite cause, happens now. We visited the gardens a night or two ago, and bear willing testimony, not only to the improvement which the place has undergone, but to the increased respectability of the company, resulting, obviously, from the adoption of a more artistic plan of management, and the introduction of those salutary regulations which do not repress gaiety, but only check and intimidate licence.

THE DAILY NEWS.

"Since last year many changes and improvements have been effected, the arcades have been remodelled, and the illuminations increased in variety and arranged among the foliage with most pleasing and picturesque effect. The great feature is a capital ballet, full of busts and action, graced by dancing that would do honor to her Majesty's Theatre, and by a mise en scene that reminded us of one of Vestris's happiest efforts. Altogether the entertainments are of a superior order, and evince a spirit on the part of the management which deserves public encouragement, and bids fair to make Vauxhall as fashionable a resort as it was in days of yore."

THE SUNDAY TIMES.

"We have now to record the entire renovation of the Gardens. New decorations have been lavished upon every portion of the establishment. The most important alterations have taken place in the Theatre, the pit of which is so constructed as to be capable of instant removal, thus forming the Theatre in unpropitious weather in a short time into an admirable arena for dancing."

THE ERA.

"Old Vauxhall continues enlivingly "First Favourite," the Grand Ballet, from the getting up, and the Talent of Terpsichorean Artists displayed, fully entitled it to be so called. It is in truth, a very first-rate production, we have rarely seen a Ballet go off with more brilliant eclat."

ROYAL GARDENS, VAUXHALL,

Close MONDAY, 9th September,

With a Grand CORONATION GALA.

To all those truly illustrious, noble, and distinguished Visitors of the Royal Gardens, Vauxhall, their truly humble and very devoted Servant, C. H. SIMPSON, Master of the Ceremonies of those Gardens for Thirty-six Years, most dutifully and most respectfully begs to inform all the illustrious, noble, and all the other respectable classes that visit the Royal Gardens, that I am directed by the worthy Proprietors to announce the closing of the Royal Gardens on Monday Next, the 9th of September, upon which Night I most respectfully request to be honored with the company of all the noble and distinguished Personages who visit the Royal Gardens, it being the Last Night I shall have the high honour of receiving my illustrious Visitors, and all the other parts of a generous Public.

I also very dutifully beg to make known that the immense Portrait of myself, in its proper Costume, so much admired at my Benefit, will be, for the last time, exhibited in Variegated Lamps; and also, that my own Figure, in Fire Works, will appear very beautiful, and bow as representing Life.

The Gala will be given in Honor of the Coronation of His present Majesty, whose Royal Brother, His late Majesty, George IV. when Prince of Wales, I had the high honor of receiving in the Royal Property, and who expressed his Royal approbation at my services on many occasions; and all these reasons will, I earnestly hope, induce all the distinguished Visitors to witness the Gala, which finishes the Season at our Royal Gardens, it being the last time I shall have the high honour of receiving the distinguished Visitors until the next Season, which is in 1834.

The worthy Proprietors, on this glorious occasion, will only charge each Visitor ONE SHILLING for their Admission to all the numerous Amusements we have provided; and I am sure all our Visitors will be much obliged for such an Entertainment upon such humble Terms.

There will be Two Exhibitions of Fire Works, and a fine Concert, and all kinds of other Entertainments all the Night, when I shall have the high honour of wishing all our illustrious and distinguished Visitors farewell, and all the other parts of a generous Public.

I have the honor to remain,
Most illustrious, noble, and distinguished
Personages,
With every sense of the most profound respect,
Your very grateful and devoted humble Servant,
